Weather Satellite, Nuclear Generators Fall Into Ocean

Space Agency Denies Any Radiation Peril

VANDENBERG AIR FORCE BASE (AP)—A Nimbus weather-watch satellite vehicle went awry, was intentionally blown up and fell into the Pacific this morning with its two nuclear-powered generators.

The atomic capsules "were designed and tested to withstand ocean impact and sea water corrosion in case of such an abort," a U.S. Space Agency spokesman said.

"Extensive tests have shown that under ocean conditions the fuel will present no hazards to people or marine life."

A Navy vessel was dispatched to search the area "in preparation for undertaking possible recovery operations."

BOOSTER FAILS

The device and its booster fell into the ocean between Vandenberg Air Force Base and San Miguel Island, 45 miles south of Vandenberg and 95 miles west of Los Angeles.

The 1,260-pound observatory, third and heaviest in the $200-million Nimbus program, was aimed south toward a polar orbit. Two minutes after liftoff it was destroyed because of a malfunction in the Thorad-Agena D booster.

Advancing Nimbus techniques are expected to extend forecasts up to two weeks, eventually saving $2 billion annually in industrial losses from weather.

The Space Agency spokesman said this was the first vehicle equipped to collect all data needed for computerized forecasting. It was the first Nimbus destroyed in the program. If it had achieved orbit it would have been called Nimbus 3.

EARLIER LAUNCHES

Nimbus 1, orbited in 1964, operated a month. Nimbus 2, launched in 1966, has sent more than a million pictures of cloud cover and is still doing so.

The vehicle launched today carried two nuclear-power generating systems, each with a half-pound pod of plutonium 238 worth $500,000. They were designed to keep the satellite operating a year longer than is possible with power from solar cells, which convert sunlight into electricity but deteriorate after a few months from radiation in space.

The 5-by-2-inch metal capsules containing the plutonium 238 were built to endure 3,000-degree re-entry heats and impact anywhere on earth.

Saigon Cabinet In Peace Try Shakeup

SAIGON (UPI) — President Nguyen Van Thieu today appointed Tran Van Huong, 65, as Prime Minister in a cabinet shakeup designed to strengthen South Vietnam's bargaining position in any peace talks.

Thieu named the extremely popular former school teacher only eight hours after Nguyen Van Loc, a lawyer and poet, resigned the prime ministership and announced the demise of a 17-man cabinet which had been criticized for playing too passive a role in peace moves.

Loc had been under increasingly heavy pressure from some quarters of the South Vietnamese Congress who said a cabinet of "national unity" representing several political factions was needed to set the stage for possible peace negotiations.

The Loc cabinet had been criticized as a "do nothing" panel of "technicians" with no popular appeal who were unable to press forward with reforms promised by President Thieu.

Loc became Prime Minister last October when the new constitutional government was formed and was said to have been the choice of Vice President Nguyen Cao Ky. Thieu and Ky have never seen eye to eye on many questions.

Referring to the Thieu-Ky feud, one Saigon newspaper recently described Loc, 45, as a "bride who had to serve two mothers-in-law."

In Moscow, the Soviet government newspaper Izvestia said in a commentary today Loc was forced to resign as a "scapegoat" for U.S. "military and political failures." Izvestia said the shakeup demonstrated the "corruption of the puppet regime and the crisis of American policy."

Thieu announced Huong's appointment in a nationwide television speech in which he promised to introduce a new Cabinet in a few days.

Ky was out of town when the announcement was made. Informed political sources said he had left the city "to attend to business" in Nha Trang, a seaport 200 miles northeast of Saigon.

Huong is a native of the Mekong Delta in the southern part of South Vietnam, thus balancing the Saigon hierarchy. Thieu is from the central area and Ky is a northerner.

U.S. Demands Reds Confess Role Of Army

Longest Session But 'No Progress' Is Announced

PARIS (UPI) — The United States demanded today that Hanoi admit it has troops fighting in South Vietnam if it wants the Americans to stop all bombing of North Vietnam. But the Communists refused to do so and denounced the United States as "obstinate and perfidious."

In the longest and bitterest session of the Paris talks so far, Hanoi told the United States bluntly it must halt all bombing of North Vietnam immediately and unconditionally if it wants real peace talks.

SOLDIERS CITED

U.S. chief negotiator W. Averell Harriman told Hanoi representatives in a sharp exchange that North Vietnam now has 85,000 military personnel in South Vietnam, some 15,000 of them serving in supposedly Viet Cong units.

He said that during the attack on Saigon earlier this month, North Vietnam had four of its army regiments in action around the capital. He said units of at least two of these regiments fought within eight miles of Saigon itself.

Harriman duelled with North Vietnam's chief negotiator, Xuan Thuy, in their third formal session that lasted for more than four hours, and wound up the first week of preliminary talks in the old Hotel Majestic, near the Arc de Triomphe.

'NO PROGRESS'

"There was no progress at all," U.S. delegation spokesman William J. Jorden said after the

Saigon Shelled; Heavy Battle Near Da Nang

SAIGON (UPI) — Communist forces sent rockets and mortar shells hurtling into the center of Saigon today in an attack on the 78th birthday of North Vietnamese President Ho Chi Minh. About five to 10 explosions shattered the predawn calm, and started fires.

The Communist barrage hit the South Vietnamese capital as upwards of 4,000 allied troops, including Marines commanded by President Johnson's son-in-law, battled North Vietnamese "palace guardsmen" on the fourth day of heavy fighting near Da Nang.

At least 200 Communists were reported killed in the fighting around a North Vietnamese regimental command post 20 miles south of Da Nang against U.S. losses of more than 50 killed and 200 wounded. Two North Vietnamese battalions were defending the elaborate network of trenches and bunkers.

The shelling of Saigon early today started one fire near the Central market place and another within three blocks of Independence Palace — South Vietnam's "White House." A third explosion occurred near the U.S. Embassy, an American spokesman said.

Cable Ferry System Held 'So Simple'

A cable ferry system, similar to San Francisco's cable cars, could carry commuters across the bay from Tiburon to San Francisco in 20 minutes, the Bay Area Transportation Study Commission heard yesterday.

And, the system would pay its own way, Capt. George G. Roberts, Woodside inventor and former operator of a Canadian ferry system, told the commission.

According to Roberts, ferries could be towed back and fourth across the bay by a cable, like those used by the cable cars, but larger and stronger. The cable would be submerged 50 feet below the surface so no passing ship could hit it, he said.

Since the ferry would not need its own power system, the catamaran hull of the big ferry could be filled with plastic foam, making it, in effect, an unsinkable life raft, Roberts said.

The total capital investment would be less than $10 million for two lines between the Ferry Building and Tiburon, Roberts told the commission. The system would cost less than $2.4 million a year to operate and would return an annual gross profit of

Weight Woes Solved, Gym Teacher Argues

By ALAN JONES

Elizabeth R. Blodgett's weight problem has solved itself, her attorney said yesterday, and is no longer grounds for Redwood High School declining to rehire her next year as a physical education teacher.

But counsel for the school, Richard V. Godino, disagreed in his closing remarks as Miss Blodgett's hearing ended yesterday.

It was only after careful joint effort and "a great number of observations" that she was judged not competent in her classes, Godino said.

The hearing was concluded after a delay granted May 2 so Miss Blodgett could rest. She then disappeared for two and a half days, saying she had gone to stay with friends to think things out.

Miss Blodgett sought the hearing after learning that Redwood Principal Donald A. Kreps had recommended she not be rehired because she was overweight.

In cross-examination, she told Godino her weight had varied from 150 pounds in 1957 when she taught at Balboa High School, San Francisco, to 253 last summer. Her weight is now 211½, she said.

She admitted listing her weight at 170 on her application at Redwood, but said that was because "I expected to regain my more usual weight." She weighed 210 at the time.

She said her usual weight is 170, and her optimum weight 157 to 167 pounds.

Godino introduced documents from San Francisco, Petaluma and Analy school districts to show Miss Blodgett was not recommended for rehiring there.

Lawyers Hotly Argue Killing Trial Evidence

By STEPHEN COOK

Photographs and fingerprints were subjects at issue yesterday at the close of the first full day of a jury trial for Kenneth Allen Preston, accused of double murder.

Almost as much of the trial was conducted out of the jurors' presence as before them, as Dist. Atty. Bruce B. Bales and defense attorney Edwin Verzyl argued over the admissibility of photographs of the murder victims.

Preston, 20, is one of two men accused of slaying Curtis and Shirley Ackley, aged 27 and 34, in their Santa Venetia house trailer the night of Jan. 12.

As Bales described the night of the killing, Ackley returned home first, followed 10 minutes later by his blonde wife.

When deputies found them the next morning, Bales said,

Novatan Dies In Struggle Of Saigon

A Novato Army sergeant has been killed in the bitter fighting around Saigon.

M/Sgt. Daniel D. Keyes, 30, of 1145 Elm Drive, Apt. 24, was killed on May 14, his family reported yesterday.

Keyes belonged to A Co. of the Fifth Special Forces Group, stationed just outside Saigon. He had been in Vietnam since Jan. 10.

A brother, Army Sgt. Donald Keyes, was disabled in the Vietnam War last year and is in a veterans hospital in Long Beach.

Keyes was a 13-year Army veteran and once was stationed at Fort Baker. The family, including a wife, Nancy, and son, Daniel Jr., has lived in Marin County nine years.

Keyes is a native of Minneapolis, Minn.

The sergeant becomes the 22nd Marin resident killed in Vietnam.

Also surviving are a half-brother, Gerald Lindquist of Novato; a sister, Mrs. Merry Johnson of Minneapolis, and his step-father, Bertel Lindquist of Novato.

Keaton's Chapel of Marin in Novato is handling funeral arrangements.

$5 Million Cost In Riot Control

WASHINGTON (UPI) —The use of federal troops to quell violence in three cities after the slaying of Dr. Martin Luther King cost the government $5,375,400, the Defense Department said today.

The troops, including federalized national guardsmen, were deployed in Washington, Chicago, and Baltimore. Thousands of national guardsmen were mobilized for riot duty elsewhere by state governors at state expense.

Freedom Of Information Award Brings National Honor To I-J

The Independent-Journal today was announced as Freedom of Information first award winner in the national better newspaper contest sponsored by the National Newspaper Association.

In addition, a second prize in the contest's spot news photo division was won by Independent-Journal photographer Jim Kean.

Awards in the nationwide competition, which attracted 3,414 entries, were presented today at a luncheon in Los Angeles.

The Fredom of Information award, for which dailies and weeklies of all sizes competed, was for continuous effort to assure freedom of information to the public.

JUDGES' REMARKS

In selectin the Independent-Journal as first prize winner, the judges commented:

The first place Independent-Journal shows a keen sense of what freedom of information is all about. The entry consisted of 45 separate articles and editorials. The extremely well-written articles cited the abuse by public officials of the people's right to know. There were follow-up articles, editorials, and editorial cartoons. The judge was impressed by the paper's systematic policy of pursuing the subject of freedom of information."

The contest committee also called attention to the entry with this mention in a brochure on the awards distributed at the luncheon:

"In news stories and in editorials, the San Rafael Independent-Journal fought for the people's right to know.

"When the Mill Valley School District Board planned a closed session to consider appointments to committees, a reporter from the Independnet-Journal informed them they were violating a state law and committing a misdemeanor.

"The Independent-Journal covered this controversy in five news stories. The end result was that the board said there would be no more closed meetings to consider individuals for appointments.

"In one of its many editorials devoted to freedom of information, the Independent-Journal took on a planning commission's secret election meeting:

CAL PLAZA JAMMED — Despite opposition by Gov. Ronald Reagan, thousands of students and faculty members attend a "Vietnam commencement" in front of Sproul Hall on the University of California campus at Berkeley. Yesterday's rites were orderly. (UPI Telephoto)

Cal Students Defy Reagan, Hold Orderly 'Vietnam Commencement'

BERKELEY (UPI) — More than 6,000 University of California students braved the wrath of the Board of Regents and Gov. Ronald Reagan yesterday to hold a ceremony in honor of students who have promised to refuse military service.

The hour-long "Vietnam Commencement" on the steps of Sproul Hall saw several hundred students pledge that they would not accept a draft call. Speakers included educator Robert Hutchins, actor Sterling Hayden and his teen-age son and several faculty members and students.

The Regents had forbidden use of the Greek Theater for the gathering and also banned any form of commencement exercise on grounds it would violate federal statutes on aiding, abetting and counseling persons refusing military induction. A federal judge upheld the ban Thursday.

Governor Reagan had urged that the Berkeley administration and Regents forbid the program, which he termed "so indecent it would border on the obscene."

"Any affair such as this type is such an affront to every decent citizen. I have a hard time holding my temper, even when I talk about it," he commented. He cited the loss of life among U.S. servicemen in Vietnam and said the demonstration would be treason if the U.S. had declared war formally.

After the ceremony was held, the governor said that if he receives information that the event violated the Regents' ban, he might seek a special meeting of the board. But he said that if it was just "another rally on the steps . . . they may not have been breaking any laws."

Executive Vice Chancellor Earl F. Cheit and Vice Chancellor William Boyd said they saw no rule violations in the affair. "It was an orderly meeting that stayed within campus rules. I am satisfied," he said.

The Campus Draft Opposition, organizers of the rally, argued that it was not a commencement service although a huge banner above the speaker's area proclaimed "Vietnam Commencement."

MOCK RITUAL

There were many other trappings of a commencement ceremony, such as an opening prayer, an orchestra, and an imposing array of 200 professors on the steps. They are part of a group of about 1,000 teachers who have pledged to support draft resisters.

Dr. Hutchins, former president of the University of Chicago and now head of the Center for the Study of Democratic Institutions in Santa Barbara, also hit a commencement theme when he commented:

"The usual commencement marks the beginning of a new epoch for the individual," Hutchins said. "This meeting today marks the beginning of a new life for our country."

"These people have awakened the conscience of America; they have changed the course of history," he said. "The extent of the debt the country owes to those whom you represent may be measured by the present unanimity about the war in Vietnam."

Police Clear Out Sit-Ins In Columbia Apartments

By ASSOCIATED PRESS

Police routed Columbia University students and neighborhood residents today from a university-owned apartment house they had occupied to protest Columbia's multimillion-dollar expansion program in the community.

There were 121 persons arrested including 44 women as Columbia called on police for the second time in 18 days to clear demonstrators from its property. The first time was April 30 when 700 persons were arrested and about 100 injured in the clearing of five campus buildings.

NO VIOLENCE

This time the demonstrators surrendered without resistance. The sit-in was begun last evening by community residents and then supported by 1,000 students from the 25,000-student university.

In other developments, Marquette University in Milwaukee moved toward the hiring of a Negro administrator—a move demonstrators at the Roman Catholic institution had demanded.

The Rev. John P. Raynor, president, appointed a committee to work toward Negro scholarships and courses in black culture and said the committee should seek a "qualified black administrator" to coordinate the program.

HOOVER WORRIED

In Washington, FBI director J. Edgar Hoover said the revolutionary stand taken by militant black nationalist groups and new left students poses a threat to the nation's security.

In his remarks, made before a House appropriations subcommittee Feb. 23 and released today, the FBI chief declared the new left, typified by the Students for a Democratic Society, is "a new type of subversive and their danger is great."

Dr. Logan Wilson, head of the American Council on Education, said yesterday that universities have become the "scapegoats for students who are really protesting the defects of their environment."

At Trinity College in Hartford, Conn., the faculty approved a recommendation that 168 students who occupied a campus building for 32 hours last month pay their punishment in social work.

The trustees of the 1,160-student, all-male college are expected to act this weekend on the recommendation that the students be assigned to work projects such as tutoring poor students and serving as hospital aides.

The April 22 demonstration was organized by 16 of the school's 18 Negro students to demand more scholarship help for Negro students.

At the University of Wisconsin more than 300 students abandoned a seven-hour sit-in demonstration at the administration building early today after receiving an indifferent response from campus police.

The students were demanding the university withdraw $230,000 in stock from Chase Manhattan Bank which they charge provides loans for the government of South Africa. The regents earlier rejected the request.

Priests, Ex-Missionaries Accused Of Antidraft Fire

CATONSVILLE, Md. (UPI)—Nine peace demonstrators, including two priests and three former Maryknoll missionaries ousted from Guatemala for political activities, were held on federal charges today after they invaded a Selective Service office and burned 600 draft documents.

Among those arrested were the Rev. Philip Berrigan, 44, and Thomas Lewis, 28, both of Baltimore who already face possible prison terms for pouring blood on draft records in a similar demonstration last October in Baltimore.

All nine were held in Baltimore County Jail in nearby Towson following their arraignment before U.S. Commissioner H. Allan Mezger late yesterday in Baltimore. Bail was set at $7,500 each for Father Berrigan of St. Peter Clover Church, and Lewis and $2,500 each for the others.

Others included John Hogan, 33, Thomas Melville, 37, former Maryknoll missionaries, and Melville's wife, Marjorie Lois Bradford Melville, 38, a former Maryknoll sister, all of Washington. They were ousted from Guatemala along with Melville's brother earlier this year on charges of taking part in anti-government guerrilla activities.

The other demonstrators were James McGinnis Darst, 26, a teaching brother at Providence High School in St. Louis, Mo.; George Mische, 30, of Washington, a peace worker, and Mary Moylan, a Baltimore nurse.

The nine allegedly entered the Selective Service office in the Baltimore suburb, gathered up 600 draft records, dumped them into two large wire trash baskets they brought with them and set them afire in a nearby parking lot.

Mrs. Mary Murphy, 59, chief clerk and one of three women in the office at the time, said the group emptied the contents of four file drawers into the baskets.

The Rev. George O'Day, superior general of the Josephite Fathers in Baltimore, said he would take action against Father Philip Berrigan for his second protest.

"I can't understand it but I will have to take some action this time," the superior general said. "It's just as ridiculous as the last time. I just can't understand it."

Harbor Lease On Council Agenda

A review of the city's yacht harbor lease with developer Paul B. Fischer will be taken up when the Mill Valley City Council meets at 8 p.m. Monday in the council chamber.

Fischer is seeking changes in terms drawn up two years ago in an option agreement.

The council will also hold second reading of an ordinance annexing the Tamalpais High School and the tidelands between the school and Highway 101, the area including the rest of the harbor and a chunk of Richardson Bay.

Indonesia Names New Army Leader

JAKARTA, Indonesia (AP) — President Suharto installed a trusted general as army commander yesterday and indicated he will reshuffle top armed forces brass soon to put other loyalists in command.

The new army chief is Gen. Maraden Panggadean, a 45-year-old Christian from Sumatra who has been acting commander under Suharto since last year.

Transplant Patients All Doing Well

LONDON (AP) — Britain's four transplant patients—a boy with a new lung, a businessman with a new heart and two girls with new kidneys—all were reported doing well today.

Alex Smith, 15-year-old Scottish schoolboy described as perhaps the world's first accident victim to receive a major transplant, was in smiling spirits with his new lung. He sat up in bed eating ice cream.

Britain's first heart transplant patient, Frederick West, 45, was getting along fine 15 days after his operation. Doctors at the National Heart Hospital in London said: "His condition continues to be very satisfactory."

West got his heart and two women got new kidneys from an Irish carpenter killed in a fall on a building site.

One of the women was Barbara Bushell, 18, the daughter of a police sergeant. The name of the other was not made public. Both operations took place May 3. A spokesman at Hammersmith Hospital, London, said "both are comfortable."

In Paris, the morning bulletin from Broussais Hospital today said Rev. Charles Boulogne, who received a transplanted heart last Sunday, continues to make satisfactory progress.

Magazine Gets Aid

NEW YORK (AP) — Time, Inc. has agreed to advance $5 million to the Curtis Publishing Co. in a plan to reduce Curtis' large financial losses in recent years.

Directors of Time and Curtis announced yesterday they had approved a plan designed to "strengthen the publishing, printing and circulation activities of Curtis and to permit the continued publication of the Saturday Evening Post on a healthy financial basis."

Martin S. Ackerman Jr., Curtis president, said the program calls for cutting the Post's circulation to less than half its current 6.8 million, with Post subscribers allowed to receive Life magazine instead for the remainder of their subscription. Post subscribers refusing Life as a substitute will be offered other magazines or a cash refund.

Minority Plan Urged

SANTA BARBARA (AP) — The University of California was pledged today to a long-range drive to aid Negroes and help solve urban problems, but some students were pressing for stronger acts.

"Our nation, our state and our cities are in the grip of a crisis," U.C. President Charles J. Hitch in a report to the regents yesterday spelled out immediate and eventual aims to enroll minority students, use university experts to solve slum problems and enlist California schools and universities in the program.

Student leaders asked for a committee with strong representation to help enroll minority students. A group called the Martin Luther King Coalition from the Davis campus asked for massive student aid by next fall.

Neither group received an immediate answer from the regents, many of whom said the chief stumbling block was money.

Fraternity Fire

SOUTH KINGSTOWN, R.I. (AP) — A pre-dawn fire at a University of Rhode Island fraternity house today killed one student and hospitalized eight others, including a girl.

The Sigma Pi fraternity was almost destroyed in the blaze, which broke out about four hours after a party ended.

The dead student was not immediately identified by college officials.

Czech-Russ Talks

PRAGUE (UPI)—Soviet Premier Alexei Kosygin and Czechoslovakia's reformist leaders conferred "in a cordial and comradely atmosphere" today on Czech attempts at democratization that have shaken the Soviet bloc, the Czech news agency said.

A veil of secrecy was clamped on Kosygin's whereabouts before and after the Saturday noon conference.

Diplomatic sources considered the lightning visit of the Soviet premier and Soviet Defense Minister Andre Grechko as a move by Moscow to try to talk Czech leaders out of their galloping liberalism before taking any drastic steps from the Kremlin.

LBJ Revisits Senate

WASHINGTON (AP) — "I always profit from what I learned from members of this great body," said the tall Texan as he stood in the Senate chamber where he servd as Democratic leader.

The speaker was President Johnson, who made a four-minute visit to the Senate floor yesterday.

"I hope in the years to come I will have the privilege of seeing all of you from time to time and together we can continue to build and develop this nation and to continue to make it the best country in all the world," he told the senators.

Earlier, the President was the guest of honor at his annual Capitol Hill lunch with Senate members. About 60 of the 100 senators attended.

Radiation Error

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Public Health Service has confirmed there is an erroneous belief among X-ray technicians that Negroes require higher radiation doses than whites in the making of diagnostic X-rays.

Dr. Robert Elder, assistant to the director of the PHS National Center for Radiological Health, told UPI yesterday it had noticed in January the standard textbook for X-ray technicians was among materials perpetuating the myth.

Earlier in the week, author Ralph Nader said Negroes were getting one-fourth to one-half more radiation than whites from X-rays because of "widespread folklore" among technicians.

"These practices come up every once in a while and you have to squelch them as soon as possible," Elder commented.

Arson Jury Fails

HATTIESBURG, Miss. (AP) —A deadlocked jury has brought about a mistrial in the case of Sam Holloway Bowers Jr., former Ku Klux Klan imperial wizard charged with arson in the firebomb death of a Negro leader.

A circuit court jury reported late last night it was deadlocked with 11 voting guilty and one voting innocent. Judge Stanton Hall then declared a mistrial.

Treasure Lost

NEW YORK (UPI) — The American wife of a wealthy British expatriate reported today she left $200,000 worth of uninsured jewelry in a box in a taxicab on the way to her hotel after an evening of bridge with friends.

Mrs. Arthur F. Grosshof, 54, formerly of New York, is on a visit from Madrid where she now lives with her husband, a retired executive of the Canada Dry beverage firm.

Poor People's Leaders Disagree On Fund Crisis, But Press Plans

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Poor People's Campaign says that even though it's almost broke, it plans to more than double the population of the nation's capital with a million-member demonstration on Memorial Day.

Organizers of the camp-in agree that after only one week in Washington, they are faced with a crisis of less money and more people to care for than they had anticipated.

PINCH, PRESSURE

The campaign coordinator, The Rev. Bernard Lafayette, insisted at a news conference yesterday that $3 million is needed just to finish building the plywood huts of "Resurrection City U.S.A." that now houses about 600 demonstrators near the Lincoln Memorial.

The Rev. Ralph David Abernathy, SCLC president, told a news conference in Albuquerque, N.M., yesterday that construction is being hampered because of "pressures brought to bear on lumber companies."

He said several lumber companies had agreed to provide construction materials. He did not elaborate.

But he did say: "We're going to build the city regardless of the cost."

ONLY $200,000

Lafayette's assistant, deputy coordinator Anthony Henry, said the campaign was only $200,000 short.

Albert Gollin, a camp construction official, listed the top cost of the settlement at $500,000, and Lafayette later said he had assumed, perhaps wrongly, that when an aide told him $3 million was needed to "pull us out of the hole . . ." the aide meant the sum for housing only.

SCLC sent its comptroller, James Harrison, up from Atlanta to check on the figures. Harrison said he would have no statement until he had examined the records.

One of the campaign's basic problems—more people than it had counted on—was evident. Another 1,000 people from the Midwest were due in today, adding to the 900 who arrived from New England yesterday and the 340 from Chicago Thursday.

Almost all were housed in area churches while workmen build more tent-shaped plywood huts.

By the time caravans from the Far West and the Southwest arrive May 24, Lafayette said, the campaign will have 5,000 people to house instead of its original target of 3,000.

Demonstrators arriving for the huge May 30 demonstration must pay their own way, Lafayette said. No details were available.

Earlier yesterday, Abernathy called upon the General Assembly of the United Presbyterian Church in the U. S.A. to set up a $10 million fund to help economically distressed areas.

"If we were able to use just 50 per cent of the invested funds of your board of pensions," he told 1,500 delegates and visitors, "we could make a major dent in the housing needs of such cities as Atlanta, Cleveland and Minneapolis."

Salt Lake City Is Host To California Marchers

SALT LAKE CITY (UPI) — A California contingent of the Poor Peoples March was to head for Denver today after enjoying a giant feed-in and brief rally here last night.

Jim Mock, Millbrae, regional coordinator for the 140 marchers from San Francisco and Sacramento, said the group planned to hold a massive rally in Denver this afternoon where it will meet with about 100 marchers from the Los Angeles area.

During the rally at Pioneer Park last night, Mock declared the march was not solely a ramification of the Negro struggle but part of an "American struggle."

"I challenge both black and white to wake up before its too late," hs said.

Dr. Charles Nabors, a University of Utah professor, said poor people should beware of "wild rumors" that once the Vietnam war ends, the money being spent on the conflict will be used for the betterment of the poor.

"That money wasn't being spent on the poor before the war, so we'd just better watch where that money goes when the war's over," he said.

A spokesman for an ad hoc committee formed here to provide food and lodging for the three bus loads of marchers, said it received more than enoough food for the occasion.

Mrs. Judy Williams, Salt Lake City, chairman of the committee urged the local poor people among the some 300 persons gathered to feed the marchers to take the surplus food home. However, much of it had to be carted off by those who brought it.

TRIAL

Ackley was in a rear bedroom — shot in the head.

Mrs. Ackley's nude body was on the living room floor. She had been beaten, shot, raped and left "grossly exposed," Bales said.

These were the scenes the prosecutor tried to show the jury yesterday, with large black and white prints and colored slides.

"These are all inflammatory," Verzyl said. "And colored slides! I'll have to object to every one. God Almighty, colored slides. You want them in just because they're shocking. You just want to get the blood in.

"The only purpose to be gained by you introducing these is to inflame the jury. The defendant has not contested the fact that these people died by criminal means," he said.

Judge Joseph G. Wilson allowed the photographs of Mr. Ackley to be shown to the jury, but reserved until later his judgment on the pictures of Mrs. Ackley's body.

"We have to consider whether these pictures are really needed, in light of their obvious inflammatory nature," he said.

The judge also rejected an appeal by Bales that he be allowed to show the jury a posed color photograph of Mr. and Mrs. Ackley and their grandchild.

"Can't you realize the impact this type of photo would have on the jury? I'm surprised at you, Mr. Bales," the judge said.

Before the jury, Verzyl hammered away at the fact that no fingerprints of Preston were found at the murder scene.

"Can you think of any better way to identify a suspect than with fingerprints?" he asked Earl F. Cummesky, supervisor of the Marin sheriff's bureau of identification and records.

"No," Cummesky said.

"Were any of Mrs. Preston's fingerprints found at the murder scene?" he asked. The answer was the same.

Pressed by Verzyl, Cummesky also reported that no glove imprints were found in the trailer house. All that was found, he said, were fingerprints of Mr. and Mrs. Ackley.

Much of the afternoon was spent introducing physical evidence, such as bloody garments, bullets retrieved from the victim's heads and two pillows, with bullet holes and powder burns, apparently used to muffle the sounds of gunshots.

Cummesky displayed a box holding 44 live rounds of cartridges and five spent shell casings.

Bales, during his opening statement to the jury, said such a box was found in Preston's chest of drawers in Santa Rosa. On the night of the murder, five bullets were fired into the heads of the victims, Cummesky testified.

Preston, who faces the possibility of the death penalty if convicted, will be returned to court Tuesday at 10 a.m. for the resumption of his trial.

A co-defendant, Johnny Lee Sommerhalder, 24, of Santa Rosa, is scheduled for a trial beginning June 10 in Marin Superior Court.

Both men, members of a motorcycle gang called the Grim Reapers, face an additional murder charge in Santa Rosa for their alleged participation in the slaying of a 19-year-old junior college student and the rape of his companion.

Mill Valley Girl Hit On Bicycle

A 9-year-old Mill Valley bicyclist received minor injuries yesterday when she collided with a car, Mill Valley police reported.

Police said Mrs. Paula C. Harris was backing her car out of her driveway at 215 Throckmorton Avenue about 8:30 p.m. when Cherie Thomas of 17 Cornelia Avenue rode her bike out into the street to get around the car. Mrs. Harris was unable to stop in time, hitting the girl, police said.

The child was treated for bruises at Marin General Hospital.

Hit-Run Charge Follows 1:30 A.M. Kentfield Brawl

A youthful brawl early today in Kentfield ended abruptly when one of the combatants drove a car into a group of boys on a sidewalk, injuring two of them, officers said.

The driver, Christopher Lang, 26, of Alameda, was later arrested on suspicion of felony hit and run driving and booked at Marin County jail with bail set at $2,500.

Injured were James Lee Clemons, 18, of 20 Walnut Street, Larkspur, and Terrence Francis Rilla, 17, of 3 Maple Avenue, Kentfield. Neither were seriously injured.

The fracas started when a group of boys were returning from a dance in Muir Beach in a pickup truck driven by Rilla, officers said.

With Rilla were Robert Lane, 16, of 42 Redwood Drive; Richard R. Lines, 20, of 90 Upper Briar Road, and Mark Shanahan, 18, of 925 Sir Francis Drake Boulevard, all of Kentfield, and Roger Garety, 17, of 4 Los Cerros Drive, and Brent Twoomey, 17, 51 Via Navarro, both of Greenbrae.

The boys told California Highway Patrol and sheriff's officers that they had first had a "minor fight" with Lang and his brother, Scott, 18, of Ross, on Shoreline Highway on Mount Tamalpais.

They said this fight started when Lang "tail-gated" Rilla, then cut in front of the pickup and blocked the highway.

The boys said the fight then broke up and they drove off into Mill Valley. The Lang car followed, according to the report, and when the truck stopped in Kentfield at about 1:30 a.m. to drop Shanahan at his home on Sir Francis Drake Boulevard, Lang challenged the boys to fight.

Clemons, who had been visiting Shanahan's home, told officers he came out on the sidewalk and that Lang drove his car into the group.

Lang ran off and was arrested later in San Rafael.

Also arrested at the scene of the brawl were Lang's younger brother and Lines, both on suspicion of disturbing the peace. They have been released on $125 bail.

Clemons and Rilla were treated at Marin General Hospital for cuts and bruises.

meeting.

At Harriman's request, their next meeting was put off until Wednesday morning. Jorden said today's meeting "just did not produce enough to build on for another meeting sooner."

The U.S. spokesman said that Harriman declined to hold the next meeting Tuesday, because of another appointment although he would not confirm this. Informed sources said the reference was to a scheduled meeting between Harriman and French President Charles de Gaulle.

De Gaulle has been in Romania during the week making a state visit to that Communist country. But he cut short his stay today and flew back to Paris to deal with a mounting emergency that has seen students and workers occupy universities, theaters and factories and a mounting siege of the de Gaulle regime.

Jorden said that despite pressure from Harriman, the North Vietnamese delegation refused to admit the presence of North Vietnamese troops in the South. He quoted Thuy as saying "the whole problem is U.S. aggression."

Harriman, the spokesman said, declared he was astounded by the North Vietnamese refusal.

In a two-hour opening broadside, Thuy said the United States was "obstinate and perfidious" in not agreeing to end the bombing.

In addition to a total bombing halt, he demanded all U.S. troops be pulled out of South Vietnam and an end to American "aggression" against Laos and of U.S. "threats and intervention" in Cambodia.

The North Vietnamese negotiator rejected a proposal by Harriman that both sides pull back their troops from the demilitarized Zone (DMZ) between North and South Vietnam. He said the two sides are "diametrically opposed" on five points which Harriman had said showed some signs of agreement.

Thuy also rejected a U.S. proposal that the International Committee of the Red Cross investigate the situation in Vietnam.

more than $3 million, he said.

The system, which could be built and in service within two years, would carry 4,000 persons per hour on a one-way fare of 25 cents or a 12.5-cents commuter fare, competitive with the Golden Gate Bridge tolls, Roberts said.

It would provide "safe and efficient service to Marin County" at a speed of 15 knots (17 plus miles per hour) making the crossing in 20 minutes or less, he noted.

"The idea . . . was so simple that I thought there must be something wrong with it," Roberts said. So he checked with William Riech of Grace Line, "one of the foremost marine engineers in the country," and with naval architect David J. Seymour, and they both said the system would work.

Riech and Seymour said no navigational hazards were involved since the ferry route would be through an existing cable crossing route, where ships are forbidden to drop their anchors.

Massachusetts is 190 miles long and from 60 to 100 miles wide, containing 8,266 square miles in area.

Parents Ask Principal's Job For Aide

A parents' petition drive has begun in the Reed School District to win appointment of John C. Fitch, for 10 years a principal in the district, as principal of Del Mar School next term.

Fitch this school year was "dissemination expert" of an experimental education project at Granada School in the Reed district. His salary of $16,000 was paid by a Kettering Foundation grant. The grant, and the project, have expired.

Fitch's status for next year was discussed at a meeting of the Reed School District board on May 7, after Supt. H. Joseph Edgington reported in closed session regarding principal assignments for next year. It will be discussed again at the board meeting at 8 p.m. Tuesday at Del Mar School.

POST OPEN

The principalship of Del Mar School will be vacant; Robert Gaw has been reassigned from that job to oversee the start of the district's new middle school, which he presumably will head. Fitch, however, was not proposed during the open board meeting May 7 for the Del Mar principalship.

Parents circulating petitions, who include Mrs. Orton W. Buckner and Mrs. Kelly J. Wheeler among others, want Fitch to be given the job. They contend he has been a successful administrator during the 10 years in the district. He was hired as principal of Bel Aire School, and at one period was principal of both Bel Aire and Granada. He has also served as acting superintendent during a couple of interim periods.

NO TENURE

Fitch was one of two men hired under the Kettering Foundation grant for the experimental project at Granada School. The other, Lynn Jenks, who was director of research at $15,000, had not previously served in the Reed district.

The Kettering grant ran out early this year and $25,000 in federal funds was obtained to carry the project through the school year.

Had Fitch been a teacher in the district before being appointed principal, he would have acquired tenure and could not be dismissed without cause. However, since he was hired originally as principal, he is on an annual contract basis without tenure rights.

but hearing officer Paul A. Winton upheld an objection by her attorney, Leonard A. Bjorklund, against using them in questioning.

Winton allowed a line of questioning about a hearing before the state Industrial Accident Commission in 1966, after Miss Blodgett had injured her knee on a trampoline.

Godino produced her testimony from that hearing that her ability as a physical education teacher was impaired because she could not demonstrate some physical activities.

Miss Blodgett said yesterday that use of students to demonstrate some activities was the usual practice at the school. She also said she had regained full use of the knee, although it is "wired together" and she does not use a trampoline now.

Asked if there were any courses she could not teach, she said she preferred not to teach water dance, and would like more background training before teaching sex education.

Godino brought on one witness originally asked to testify by Bjorklund, but who was never called.

"Why weren't you called?" Godino asked Cathryn Twede, former Redwood student now at College of Marin.

"I said I had been embarrassed once at watching Miss Blodgett demonstrate," said Miss Twede, a physical education major.

But Miss Twede said she could not recall any pupils ridiculing or mimicking Miss Blodgett.

Miss Twede said the teacher looks "much better . . . wonderful" compared to when she weighed 253.

"How would you classify Miss Blodgett as a teacher?" Bjorklund asked.

"A great teacher," Miss Twede replied.

Bjorklund said the decision not to rehire the teacher was for "lack of a physical image," and said that was not due cause as required by the Education Code.

"What happened to Betty Blodgett," he said, "is she was getting very poor medical advice."

Since changing doctors and taking a thyroid replacement regime, Miss Blodgett's weight has dropped to 222, four pounds more than when she was hired.

"The suggestion is," Godino said, "that three grains of thyroid . . . will magically solve the situation . . . I wish that were the case."

Godino said there is "nothing to indicate . . . the district won't be faced with the problem again."

Winton will hand down a decision within 15 days.

Dead Woman In Auto Crash Is Identified

The young woman killed yesterday in an auto crash at Samuel P. Taylor State Park, has been identified as Katharine Heyworth, 25, of no known address.

She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert M. Walsh of Palo Alto.

Funeral arrangements are pending at N. Gray and Co. in San Francisco.

The accident, in which four young men were injured, is still being investigated by California Highway Patrol officers.

A sixth occupant of the car apparently survived the wreck and wandered off. Officers do not know who was driving the car, which left the road between 3 and 5 a.m. yesterday and landed upside down in a creek in the park.

Novato Board To See Budget

The board will also hold a closed meeting at 7:30 p.m., to interview an applicant for one of two principalships which will be open next school year. At a closed meeting last Monday night, the board interviewed five applicants for the positions.

The board will also discuss capital outlay needs.

Fairfax Noise Issue Solved

A special meeting of the Fairfax City Council fizzled out last night after a local market solved its noise problems to the satisfaction of some of its neighbors.

The council failed to obtain a quorum for the meeting. Mayor Robert R. Souza reported, after councilmen learned the Stop Short Market had made modifications to muffle the noise of the store's refrigeration unit.

Souza said the store's owner had cut holes in the roof to deflect the noise upwards and had closed off the west end of the unit to prevent the noise from bothering the neighbors, who have been complaining about the machinery for several months.

Souza said the councilmen had visited three of the complaining neighbors on Thursday night. One, to the west, was "very happy," Souza said. The others still were bothered by some noise but were willing to give the store owner a few more days to effect more modifications, he said.

Bolinas Blaze Blamed On Sun Ray In Mirror

The sun and a mirror caused a fire in Bolinas yesterday.

But fast action by the owner of the home, a member of the Bolinas Volunteer Fire Department, saved the house.

Sun rays, filtering through a bamboo curtain in the bedroom of the Archie Goldsberry home on Oak Road, were reflected off a concave mirror on a dresser. The magnified rays bounced back to the curtain, setting the blaze, according to Bolinas Fire Chief Jose Silva.

The Goldsberrys were eating dinner when the fire started at 6:20 p.m. While Mrs. Goldsberry called firemen, her husband pulled the curtains from the window and dragged them outside. He had things under control when the firemen arrived.

Goldsberry suffered minor hand burns. Damage to the furniture, walls and rugs was estimated at $1,000 by Silva.

The National Gallery of Art in Washington, D.C., was established by a Joint Resolution of Congress March 24, 1937.

Court Defiance Is Pressed By Mime Troupe

The San Francisco Mime Troupe was to perform this afternoon and at 3 p.m. tomorrow outside the Mill Valley Youth Center, despite a court order.

Joan Holden, a writer for the troupe, said it was not known what the group would perform.

Marin Superior Court Judge Joseph G. Wilson ruled Thursday that the troupe could not perform outside the center without a permit. But the mimes said yesterday they planned to appear this weekend anyway.

Mill Valley City Atty. Leland H. Jordan said after the troupe's announcement that the group could be arrested if judged to be giving an "organized" performance outside the center.

HELEN HELP US!

By HELEN BOTTEL

If You Throw A Teen A Bone Expect Him To Pick It Up

DEAR HELEN:

This is a gripe shared by a lot of us supposedly teen leaders. Adults make a big thing out of putting us on advisory committees to help solve community problems. It's an honor for us, and we appreciate it, but what a let-down when you go to the meetings and discover you're there just for looks.

A couple of us seniors were asked to serve on the mayor's committee to improve racial relations. Well, we worked hard and got up a good report with suggestions that made sense. What did we get from the adults? Not even their attention! They already knew just what they were going to do. We had been included mainly because it made good publicity for the mayor.

I know a girl who is on the advisory board of a national teen magazine. They urge her to send in reports, suggestions, ideas. You'd think they'd at least acknowledge her efforts with a personal letter, but no, she gets a printed thank you notice once in a while. She finally realized this was honorary only — she wasn't supposed to put out.

I hope you'll publish my letter as a reminder to adults that if they throw us a bone, they should expect us to pick it up and run with it. We'd be honored to work with them, if they'd let us work. We don't expect them to accept all our ideas, but we believe we rate something more than condescension. We'd like the courtesy of their ears, and the compliment of their arguments. — SILENT COMMITTEE MEMBER

DEAR COMMITTEE MEMBER:

I'll be glad to print your reminder — with an added one of my own:

Dear Adult Committee members, etc.: You can't close the generation gap by filling it up with hot air. If you want rapport with those honored teen leaders, then treat them as the wise young adults they are.

Listen! And learn! — H.

DEAR HELEN:

A few days ago I was asked to another school's dance by a guy who goes there. Though I really wanted to attend my own school's dance that same night, I accepted. After all, a bid in the hand is better than waiting for one that might not come.

Well, the next day — wouldn't you know — I was asked to my own school dance by a guy I really like. He said I should get out of the first date by saying I was sick on the night of the dance.

I know this wouldn't be right, but isn't there some nice way I could break that date? — HELP

DEAR HELP:

You made your bid, now don't lie out of it! And be a little leary of a fellow who asks you to. He might try the same sneakiness on you some day. — H.

DEAR HELEN:

I am 18. The father of my baby won't marry me, though he says he loves me and still wants to go around with me. Now up pops R.T. He loves me and will even adopt my child if I marry him. But he's so ugly! Which should I choose? — ALL MIXED UP

DEAR AMU:

Neither! The first fellow is as unfair to you as you would be to the second fellow, if you married him for security. Wait for Number 3. — H.

You Can Experiment With Changing Darts If You Are Not A Beginner

By EUNICE FARMER

Dear Eunice,

You tell us that pattern companies very rarely make mistakes, but I must ask about the position of a dart on a new pattern. There is no bust line dart. Instead, the dart extends at an angle from the armhole to a point above the bust. I have read that a dart may be repositioned to the most becoming line for the individual. I have never heard of a dart that extended from the armhole and wonder if there was an error in the pattern. If not, can the position of this dart be changed?

Mrs. E. H.

Dear Mrs. E. H.:

Yes, the position of any dart may be changed, but if you are a complete beginner at sewing I wouldn't suggest you begin by changing the darts. Follow the instruction carefully, step by step, and then try your next experiment on an inexpensive piece of fabric. If this works out, you will have new courage to experiment more often.

If you wish to change your dart to a French dart, one that extends from below the waistline at the side seam and angles up to the point of the bust, you must draw a line on your pattern for this dart. Slash your pattern on this new line(a).

Now, cut your pattern at the center of the dart you wish to take away. Lap the seam lines of the original dart over each other and pin closed (b). This will atuomatically open the new dart to the correct width.

You have one more important detail to complete. You must know just how large the side seam extension should be for the new dart before cutting garment. Pin a piece of paper under your pattern, forming an extension at the side. Next, fold your pattern on the new dart, bringing the lower edge of the dart up to meet the top edge (c). The extended paper should be included in this fold. If there are any changes to be made at the side seams such as adding extra width, draw this extension while the dart is still folded in place. Cut your pattern on your new side seam marks, unpin the pattern and fold down the new dart (d). You will be amazed to find the shape of the side seam to accommodate this dart.

I hope you won't be discouraged by mentally trying to follow these instructions. File this column away until you wish to change the darts and then follow my instructions step by step — it really works!

TAILOR TRIX WINNER

Jean Suter, of Louisville, Ky. is this week's pressing board winner for this suggestion:

"I do a lot of alterations, and I find a tooth brush is a wonderful aid on the ironing board. I use it to brush away the loose threads from the seams as I press. It is also good to dampen that seam just enough to remove the old stitching line."

Dear Eunice Farmer,

I have always had problems with sewing in a zipper on velvet material. No matter what I do, the velvet keeps pushing away from the zipper, even if it has been basted.

Mrs. L. T.

Dear Mrs. L. T.:

Because of the pile of velvet, it does become very tedious to put in zippers. I would suggest you insert the zipper entirely by hand. This is done with a small back stitch such as we use for hand picking. The stitches should be spaced about ¼-inch apart. Use a double thread or buttonhole twist, and above all, keep the stitches fairly loose or the zipper closing will be pulled up out of shape.

The Now Girl

The Leo Narducci collection includes the Now Girl Narducci creations—a swinging group of shirt dresses featuring such things as dotted Swiss with wide patent belt and two-toned creamy crepes with wide self belt.

Spin Eggs

To tell whether an egg is cooked or not, take an uncooked one and spin it. It turns slowly. Then try the eggs you're not sure about. The cooked ones spin much more rapidly than uncooked ones.

Gleaming Brass

To keep your exterior brass doorknobs and house numbers gleaming, try this suggestion: Before they are installed, tie a thin string to each piece of brass and dip it into a mixture of 1 part heavy-duty spar varnish and 4 parts thinner. When coated, hang each piece to dry. When throroughly hardened, install. If your hardware is already on the door, remove each brass part, polish it, and then coat, dry, and reinstall it.

Marin's Swedish Colony Joins In Mill Valley Housewarming

By MOLLY MARIN

Several of Marin's growing colony of Swedish residents were guests at a house warming given Saturday evening by Mr. and Mrs. Don DeLone in their new Muir Meadows home in the hills above Mill Valley.

Among their guests were Swedish Consul and Mrs. Lars Schonander, who maintain a summer cabana at the Marin Golf and Country Club, and Vice Consul and Mrs. Sten Ericson of Mill Valley. The party also brought together two medical visitors from Gothenburg, Sweden, who are living in Marin. Dr. and Mrs. Bjorn Tengroth are living in Tiburon while Dr. Tengroth, an eye specialist, does research on the eye's reaction to space travel. Dr. and Mrs. Avante Rolander are living on Belvedere Island.

A frequent Marin sailor, Sweden's Count Jan Lewenhaupt, brought Countess Margaretha from their Peninsula home to attend the DeLone's party.

A COCKTAIL PARTY and buffet dinner will follow a mixed-doubles round robin tennis tournament at the Rafael Racquet Club in San Rafael tomorrow, with some 80 guests expected to attend. Hosts will be Mr. and Mrs. A. Harold Wagner, Mr. and Mrs. J. William Parker of Mill Valley and Mr. and Mrs. V. Judson Klein of San Rafael. They will be assisted by Messrs. and Mesdames John Montgomery of Mill Valley, Robert F. Clark of Greenbrae, Giadomenico Renda of Greenbrae, William S. Dakin of Greenbrae and Howard F. Hall of San Anselmo.

THEIR FIRST child has been adopted by Mr. and Mrs. Marvin Bienstock of Terra Linda. The baby girl has been named Darcy Ruthann.

A BRIDAL shower was given for Cynthia Allen of Burlingame, who will marry Vincent Maggiora of Sausalito on June 22. The shower was given by Mrs. Ed Rogers, the future bridegroom's cousin, and his aunt, Mrs. Louis Maggiora of Burlingame, at the Rogers' Sausalito home.

SEVERAL COCKTAIL parties are planned to precede Saturday night's "Fiesta Mexicana" of the Sausalito woman's club. Entertaining at their homes will be the George Chapmans and Francis Griffins, and Dr. and Mrs. Frank E. Rossman are planning a large no-host table at the dinner-dance.

State Senator John L. Harmer To Address Motion Picture Council

SEN. JOHN L. HARMER

State Senator John L. Harmer, of Gendale, a practicing attorney and representative of the 21st Senatorial District, will be the guest speaker when the Marin Motion Picture and Television Council holds its annual luncheon meeting at Peacock Gap Country Club on Tuesday.

Senator Harmer will discuss the background for his decision to submit his Bill 372, which calls for classification of films into three categories: general audience; not suitable for juveniles; and harmful to minors, and for the restriction of attendance of minors at those classified as harmful.

John Harmer has been active in his community, having served the March of Dimes, Easter Seal Campaign, and Rehabilitation Center of Children's Hospital. While on a special mission to Great Britain in 1955-57 for the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, he observed the economic and social working of a foreign country.

He is author of a book, "We Dare Not Fail," which covers major areas of concern in the State of California — education and welfare. He is a member of the Republican State Central Committee, and was coordinator for several major congressional campaigns in Southern California, where he and his wife and children reside.

Co-chairmen for the Marin Motion Picture and Television Council luncheon and annual meeting are Mesdames Roger W. Erickson and Hutton W. Theller. Mrs. Joseph Diodati is ticket chairman and donation chairmen are Mesdames David B. Lucas and Douglas Lindauer.

Registration will open at 9:45 a.m., with the meeting set for 10 a.m., followed by lunch at noon and Senator Harmer's talk.

College Show Proves A Happy Free-For-All

By LAURA DEVENDORF

In many ways the College of Marin student art exhibit, in the college gallery through June 14, is a surprise. It's a sort of happy free-for-all that is neither an abandoned pursuit of current "ins" nor sticky adherence to the academic.

Selected from well over 600 entries from day and night school students, the 130 pieces in the show cover concepts from a classical drawing of a head to a clock-eyed, motorized bird, covered with orange, fuchsia and green feathers. It flaps its wings to the rhythmical rise and fall of rows of clacking dentures.

The most unusual aspects of this show, however, are its areas of strength and weakness. In any mixed exhibit, painting usually predominates. But the less said about painting in this show, the better, as it is sparse and unimaginative.

STRONGEST AREAS

On the other hand, the two usually most limited areas, jewelry and sculpture, are this show's largest and often most accomplished. As a group, jewelry demonstrates an unselfconscious feeling for metals and stones.

And though heavy on rings, there are other approaches such as a pendant combining brass, copper and brown leather.

But sculpture is the standout. Plentiful and very mature, the concepts it embraces reach from a smooth, self-contained block of abstractly-carved stone to a 16-foot stretching, jagged, welded-metal Christ.

In between there are geometrics in colored plastics, clear cubes encasing metal chunks, a paper box camera with a peephole lens revealing a lighted perspective drawing inside, a musical, roly-poly floor piece plus numerous metal sculptures, many of them raw, crusty and involved. One of the most interesting of these is a heart which is polished, pocked and broken down the center to reveal an inner network of metal rods.

VARIED PHOTOS

Another, less extensive section that fares well is photography. It ranges from experimental work almost unrecognizable in subject to sensitive realism in landscape and portrait form. Weaving is another and includes a handsome, double-faced afghan and several complex hangings.

The ceramics are pleasant, varied and competent though not terribly inventive, while in drawings and graphics, many are quite accomplished. Which leaves lapidary, crafts and design to complete this entertaining and, finally, surprisingly strong showing of student art.

The Consumer Fraud Bureau in New York State handled 100,000 complaints in 1966.

France Unrest Breaks Into Film Festival

CANNES, France (UPI)—Fistfights erupted in the Cannes International Film Festival hall today when young generation producers sought to close down the show to join the French labor turmoil and disappointed spectators shouted for the festival to continue.

Jean-Luc Godard, the French film director who helped spearhead the movement for immediate closing of the festival, was knocked down in the melee during which the spectators chanted "Go to Peking."

Ross Trustees Set Session On Budget

A preliminary budget for the next school year will be discussed by the Ross School District board at 7:30 Monday at Ross School.

Also on the agenda is a discussion of a family life education program for next year.

'West Side Story' Has Impact Today

By JAMES E. WILLIAMS

College of Marin pulled out all stops last night in presenting a dazzling production of "West Side Story."

To say that it is more timely than when it was introduced on the Broadway stage more than a decade ago by a team headed by Leonard Bernstein is really a laugh.

When the musical was first presented, the United States was not faced with its present severe ethnic problems. It was, however, the pitting of a minority group against the "in" group.

UP TO THE HOUR

Director James C. Dunn has updated the musical in such a fashion that it brings home today's racial problems more than ever. It is simply a lesson in "love thy neighbor."

When this reviewer says that it is dazzling, he means that it is presented in a non-frilly fashion—the energy of the production being saved for the actors and the keenly honed pit orchestra.

STARK STAGE

Presented on a stark stage with the use of a minimum of back drops and frugal use of furniture, it makes the actors speak for its "Romeo and Juliet" plot.

And casting is wise. In Gred Norgaard, director Dunn has a perfect Tony, the leader of the Jets, a New York City gang pitted against its invaders—a Puerto Rican group led with skill by Tony Roberts as Bernardo.

The vocal ability of Norgaard, though a tad weak, is matched very well by his Juliet—Sylvia Hyde as Maria.

STELLAR ROLES

While the tragedy is centered around this park, the show is given a great uplift by most professional performances of Jane Cummings, a stunning beauty and a real professional as Anita; Mark Rasmussen as Riff, Pam Davis as Consuelo, Rosalie Hopper as Rosalia and David McCauley as Action, who really breaks up the show in the number, "Gee, Officer Krupke."

There are of course other admirable jobs, but the list goes too long to mention.

What really lifted the show from the early 1960's into the present swinging era was the use of film clips flashed in the background. They added the poetic touch matched by the Scott Merrick's pit orchestra and the choreography of Lou Nardo.

Lending to the overall effect of the total involvement was the settings of Alonso Gonzales and the lighting of Robin Jackson.

BALLET MISSING

While the choreography was fresh and vivid, the only thing missing was the haunting ballet dream scene which portrays the love of Tony and Maria.

The really unfortunate thing: the house is sold out for the next six performances. This is a type of show, in the college's excellent new auditorium, which should be seen by all who enjoy excellent theater.

Three Marinites Due Pennsylvania Degrees

Three Marin residents are scheduled Monday to receive degrees from the University of Pennsylvania in Philadelphia.

They are Andrea Gerson Good of 90 Patterson Lane, Hamilton Air Force Base, master of arts; Bradford E. Block of 99 Quisisana Drive, Kentfield, bachelor of science, and Bennet Bronson of 6 Josephine Street, Sausalito, master of arts.

Jumping Frog Madness Recurs In Sierra Town

ANGELS CAMP (AP) — It's that weekend again, the culmination of Calaveras County's bit of springtime madness — the International Jumping Frog Jubilee .

Frogmasters from around the world are flocking to this old Gold Rush community — renamed "Frogtown" for the annual four-day event — to urge their green charges toward breaking the world's record: 19 feet, 3⅛ inches.

The top winners of today's preliminaries go into the international finals tomorrow.

Among the most celebrated entries each year are the highly touted jumpers shipped in by mayors and out-of-state governors.

Mayor Willard E. Frazer of Billings, Mont., sent his entry to Angels Camp in February to get it used to "rugged" California weather.

"Mark you well, although he bears the mighty name 'Son of Sitting Bull,' he is no sitter," said a confident Frazer.

Gov. Tom McCall of Oregon is hoping his "Big Tom" will have a little more spirit than last year's Oregon entry, "Dry Sands," who refused to go more than 4 feet, 4½ inches off the pad.

Gov. John A. Burns of Hawaii sent his competitor to the mainland with an island name, "Lana Kolohe."

But there was some trouble in Iowa finding an entry for Gov. Harold E. Hughes: "A drier than average year in Iowa last year was extremely hard on our frog population," wrote C. L. Caudle, the state's tourism and travel director.

"The situation forced gourmets to import substantial quantities of frogs from Missouri. The clamor for this delicacy precludes our involving them in competition.

"We are therefore grooming our meager supply for the table."

Candidate Cites Social Needs For School Property

Development of the Tamalpais High School District's property in Marin City should "put as much weight on social needs as on physical development," Margaret Azevedo, a candidate for Marin County supervisor in the Third District, said last night.

In any event, some use must be found for the property, found surplus by the high school district, she said at a coffee for her at the Marin City home of Mr. and Mrs. Jesse Berry.

Uses being considered for the property include apartments, vocational training facilities and commercial facilities, noted Mrs. Azevedo, adding that the community must join in deciding on the future use of the property.

Utility Policy Due Hearing By Council

A hearing on a proposed ordinance amendment which would require underground utilities in all new subdivisions is on the agenda of the San Rafael City Council meeting at 8 p.m. Monday.

Councilmen will also get a look at the Division of Highways preliminary plan for the proposed new southbound viaduct on Highway 101 in San Rafael.

Funds Party Set

A public fund-raising swim party for Rev. Samuel L. Banks Jr., candidate for Marin County supervisor in the Third District, will be held at 3 p.m. tomorrow at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Meyer Baylin, 180 Marguerite Avenue, Mill Valley.

I-J Wins Two Awards In National Contest

devise new ways to spend the public's money. . . ."

Second place in this competition went to the Lansing (Ill.) Journal, and third place to the Los Alamos (N.M.) Monitor.

WINNING PHOTO

Kean's award-winning photo in the "best news pictures" competition was that of a bereaved father kneeling beside his injured son after a traffic accident, which appeared with the accident story last July 4.

The judges commented: "Jim Kean's entry stood out above all the other accident photos in its capture of a moment of human grief. Composition was almost perfect."

First place in this competition went to Curt Kitchen of the Rockford (I.) Morning Star for a picture of tornado victims.

Besides the I-J's two awards, a first place in the competition for best column including a variety of subjects was won by a Marin writer, Robert H. Kaufman of San Rafael, for his "Bob Kaufman's Mad World" in the weekly Sonoma Index-Tribune. Kaufman's column appears also in the Pacific Sun.

There were four other California first place winners: the Santa Rosa Press-Democrat for best feature story in a newspaper of over 4,000 circulation; the Santa Maria Times for best special issue in a paper over 4,000 circulation; the Dixon Tribune for best community service by a paper under 4,000 circulation, and the Sonora Daily Union Democrat for the best column on one topic.

Furrier Holdup Suspect Hears Charge In Court

Gail Edward Souza, 29, was arraigned in Marin Municipal Court yesterday on a charge of robbing $15,000 in furs at gunpoint from Landes Furs in San Rafael last Oct. 3.

Souza, of San Francisco, is currently serving a one-year term in the San Francisco County Jail for armed robbery and was transferred to Marin County Jail Thursday for trial in the San Rafael holdup.

Two gunmen entered the shop at 1211 Fourth Street, brandished small caliber pistols, then tied up owner William Landes, employee Lucy Granucci of Kentfield, and two customers, Mr. and Mrs. Richard Nicholes of San Anselmo.

The furs were taken from two front cabinets.

Judge Peter Allen Smith scheduled plea entry for 1:30 p.m. Monday.

State Imposes Bar Suspension

A 30-day suspension of the on-sale general liquor license for the Blue Fin Inn at 2007-09 Bridgeway, Sausalito, has been ordered by the state Department of Alcoholic Beverage Control.

The ABC said that one of the officers of the corporation holding the license, Johnny McRichbucks Inc., was intoxicated on the premises.

The department also charged that the licensee refilled liquor bottles.

The suspension will begin June 6.

Kennedy Due In Bay, Won't See McCarthy

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — Sen. Robert F. Kennedy will make a quick swing through the San Francisco area today and speak at a $100 a plate fund-raising dinner before flying on to Los Angeles but there probably won't be any face-to-face encounter with Sen. Eugene McCarthy.

The Senator and his mother, Rose, were scheduled to arrive at San Francisco International Airport at 4:30 p.m. They were to lead a motorcade through South San Francisco and the city later at the G.E.T. shopping center in San Francisco.

The fund-raising dinner will be at the Sheraton Palace Hotel, after which Kennedy will fly to Los Angeles.

MEETING OFF

If and when Sens. Robert F. Kennedy and McCarthy ever step up tto the same platform, don't be surprised if they make jokes about what happened in San Francisco.

Kennedy and his campaign managers agreed yesterday it was all a misunderstanding that caused the local AFL-CIO to announce both Democratic presidential aspirants would address the same fund-raising dinner Monday night.

The man who is to share the stage with McCarthy is Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, not his brother, said Bill Thomas, the New York senator's Northern California press representative.

The McCarthy camp, meanwhile, was making the most of the situation.

"It will be a clear case of lack of courage if Kennedy can't make it," said aides of the Minnesota Democrat. They said McCarthy would cut short campaigning in Oregon to attend the $30 a plate fund-raising affair.

WON'T BOW OUT

The Minnesota senator said, meanwhile, that he intends to "go all the way to Chicago and beyond—and no concessions and no compromises."

In other political developments:

Vice President Hubert H. Humphrey--Humphrey, in an appearance in Orono, Maine, caused a flap by saying the United States and North Vietnam had agreed to Viet Cong participation in the Paris talks. The State Department denied Humphrey's claim and Humphrey aides said "people were interpreting more than was meant." (See story, page 1).

Meanwhile, returns from West Virginia's primary indicated Humphrey had captured 10 national convention delegates, Kennedy only three.

NIXON VIEW

Richard M. Nixon—Nixon said yesterday the Republican presidential race is now a "three-man race" because of California Gov. Ronald Reagan's showing in the Nebraska primary. The former vice president said neither he nor Kennedy could guarantee "no more Vietnam."

Reagan Accuses Demos Of Too Many Promises

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Gov. Ronald Reagan accused President Johnson today of promising more than he could deliver and said Johnson "has now stepped aside for the simple reason that he had lost control of events."

The Republican governor was sharply criticial of the Democratic administration in remarks prepared for a speech before a luncheon of the National Newspaper Association in Los Angeles.

After listing a few major accomplishments and ambitions of his own administration in California, Reagan shifted to national politics. He praised former President Dwight Eisenhower because "his administration promoted peace and domestic tranquility and I think this country would give anything to enjoy those blessings again."

He added: "But now the government has passed into the hands of politicians who have promised too much.

"The nation was promised that it could fight a war, rebuild its cities, raise the general welfare, support a worldwide system of alliances and, in general, enjoy the good life without feeling the strain.

"Instead, a war has been all but lost; the cities are in uproar; the general welfare is being menaced by a fresh onset of inflation; the alliances have come unraveled; the dollar's authority has come under mistrust across the face of the earth; and the head of the government which brought the country to this appalling pass has now stepped aside for the simple reason that he had lost control of events."

Reagan, who has said he would not turn down the Republican presidential nomination if he is nominated at the national convention, said the country is "totally out of control because the expectations, fomented by irresponsible political leaders and transmitted to every living-room in the land, have risen faster than our society's ability to fulfill them."

It is time, Reagan said, "to stop escalating the promises and start enforcing the law before this great country is torn to pieces."

Vacancies Filled On Juvenile Justice Body

Dr. William H. Pemberton, Mill Valley psychologist and lecturer at the University of California, and Frank Mulholland, dean of boys at Sir Francis Drake High School, have been appointed to the Marin County Juvenile Justice Commission.

They were named by Superior Court Judge Samuel W. Gardiner, head of juvenile court, to fill vacancies created by the resignations of Marin County District Attorney Bruce B. Bales and Sheriff Louis P. Mountanos.

Bales and Mountanos said their duties had curtailed service to the commission, according to James D. Adams, chairman.

The commission is engaged in an extensive review of probation, placement and court procedures involved in juvenile matters, Adams said.

Other members of the commission are Mrs. Marguerite Finley, Lanny Berry, James Rockwell, Rex Silvernale, Stanley Friese and Edwin A. Wells.

Dope Raid Figure Goes To Vacaville

Monty Leon Miller, 18, the first person scheduled for sentencing in February's county-wide narcotics roundup, yesterday was instead ordered to California Medical Facility in Vacaville.

Judge Harold J. Haley of Marin Superior Court continued judgment of Miller, who had pleaded guilty to selling methedrine, pending a 90-day medical evaluation at the facility.

Miller, of San Rafael, sold $20 worth of methedrine to a Marin County Drug Abuse Bureau undercover

Prison Murder Trial Continued

Jury trial of Leon Estrada Robles, accused of murdering a fellow San Quentin Prison inmate, was continued yesterday from the week of June 3 to the week of June 17 in Marin Superior Court.

The postponement, granted by Judge Harold J. Haley, was because attorneys Roger P. Garety and Howard Morehouse were appointed May 9 to represent Robles and need more time for preparation.

The public defender's office originally represented Robles, but said it was unable to defend him because of its crowded court schedule.

The Country Club of Brookline, Mass., founded in 1882, had the first golf course in America.

WEATHER OUTLOOK IS NORMAL

NON-ELDERLY SENIOR

Sausalito Nominee Sets Hectic Pace

MRS. JOHN KOENIG
Busy campaigning for others

If Mrs. John E. Koenig had her way about it, she wouldn't be a nominee for senior citizen of the year.

For one thing, she doesn't consider herself a senior citizen, and she certainly doesn't act like someone who's reached 70.

She became the nominee of the Sausalito Woman's Club largely at the urging of some younger members, but she wants nothing to do with the slippers and rocking chair.

There isn't time. She is working full tilt on three projects now, any one enough to keep most people busy.

She is campaigning enthusiastically for the Sausalito School District tax rate election June 4, is working for Micahel Wornum's campaign for Third District supervisor, and, as a member of the Sausalito Library Commission, is working to find a site for the city's proposed new library — and to persuade voters to approve it.

Mrs. Koenig, of 31 Santa Rosa Avenue, Sausalito, is most worried about the tax rate election, which narrowly failed at the polls this spring. Opponents, she said, are epople who "travel to Europe in jets, drive a car instead of a horse and buggy, but want the schools to be what they were 50 years ago."

She doesn't go back quite that far herself. Born in San Francisco, she was the daughter of a career Army doctor, and only settled permanently in Sausalito 46 years ago.

She was a founder and first president of the Sausalito Parent-Teachers Association in 1926, a founder and board member of the nursery school, helped draw up Sausalito's first zoning ordinance, and served on a committee which blocked plans for a waterfront highway through Sausalito to the Golden Gate Bridge.

She helped organize a servicemen's club during World War II, and later was secretary on a group helping to lay the groundwork for the city waterfront plan.

She has also served on the Marin County grand jury, was co-president of the Federated Woman's Club, and has held nearly every office of the Sausalito Woman's Club, and has been chairman of St. Brigid's and St. Margaret's guilds for Christ Episcopal Church.

Friendly, frank and outspoken, Mrs. Koenig has no apparent intention of slowing down. "I don't knit shawls," she said.

The Marin Senior Citizen of the Year will be named at a dinner May 23 at Hamilton Air Force Base.

Winners Named In Runoff Vote

Rick Mulhaupt was elected student body president for next year in a runoff election yesterday at Terra Linda High School, defeating Ken Downs. Eliminated earlier had been Joel Jutovsku, Tom Micheletti and John Parker.

Bryon Sakanari defeated Gary Katz for the vice presidency in another runoff. Greg Collins had also run.

Terry Pellegrini was elected secretary, defeating Earlynn Horton, and Fred Goldman won the treasurer's job over Mark Said.

Other new officers elected were Margie Ryan, commissioner of spirti; Mark Regan, commissioner of student activities; Kathy Strachan, commissioner of social affairs, and Liz Keating, commissioner of public affairs.

The school does not release the vote count in order to spare the feelings of losers.

Harris, Lee Star In Division Meet

By GARY TISCHLER

A Marin County school did not win the mythical Redwood Empire track and field championships at the North Coast Section, Division II meet at Tamalpais High School yesterday but the MCAL still managed to look like Hulk of all the conference and track powers at this behemoth meet.

Vallejo won team honors in both the varsity and Class B categories but Tamalpais, Redwood, Terra Linda and San Rafael grabbed more than their share of what was left over, which was plenty.

It was a great meet to watch, with its share of superperformances, and surprises of those who weren't supposed to who did, and those who were that didn't.

For the MCAL, the big shining beacons were a classy hurdler named Lowell Harris and a blur of speed named Alan Lee.

Lee started his day of heroics with a fantastic anchor leg of Tam's 440-yard relay that carried the Indians from about eight yards back to a four-yard, super 41.3 victory. There isn't much you can say about that classic run except what teammate Floyd Jackson, sitting near the high jump pit, said. Woowee!

Other people said the same thing when they watched Lee win the 100 in an easy 9.8 and the 220 in a 21.9 his best effort of the year.

The double victory left Lee undefeated in three years of competition at Tamalpais.

Harris, coming up against tough competition, stood up to the test and then some, clipping his best times down to 14.4 and 19.3 in the highs and the lows, respectively, the latter tying a meet record.

In one of the more stirring races of the day, the ghost of Bob Bunnell materialized in one of the finer comebacks in a gaunt comeback.

Bunnell, the MCAL record holder in the two-mile last year, sputtered and faded into near-oblivion this year, finally finishing ignominious third in the league meet as Darron Walton, an old nemesis, went on to win.

Bunnell, probably knowing that in a close race Walton could conceivably win again, tore off in the sixth lap and opened up a 30-yard lead. Walton never caught up and had to fight to hold on to second place as Bunnell scored a great personal triumph, mostly over himself.

There were other shocks. The MCAL's high jump winner Andy McIlroy faded while Floyd Jackson, a so-so finisher in the loop meet, finished fourth. John Holiday, an old Tournament of Champions foe of Jackson's who the high jump, upsetting Kraig Fisher of El Molino at 6-2, and breaking Willie Hector's old mark of 6-1.

Young Craig Hicks, only a junior, who had never cleared 12 feet until the league meet, this time pole vaulted 13 feet in the tradition of his departed brother Jeff Hicks, for second place for Redwood in the pole vault. The winning vault was 13-3.

Jeff Cochran of Terra Linda, minus black stockings, who came out of nowhere to win the league mile last week, finished a creditable and surprising second to a 4:261.1 by John Stevens of Vallejo while Randy Harness, out of shape and out of practice still grabbed a gutty fourth for Tamalpais.

Ron Sparling of Novato continued to lead the MCAL assault with a winning 53-½ toss in the shot put with Bob Ballou of Redwood second.

In the Bees, Redwood's Wayne Horiuchi grabbed an easy mile victory, although only a sophomore and Rich Smartt of

Baseball Announcers Should Have Translators

I hate to keep bugging baseball but I think it's time once again to call sternly to its attention the way it is perpetuating the generation gap.

This is a matter which colleague Jack Olsen and I have been lobbying against for years — the lack of communication between the modern generation of the Grand Old Game and ours.

Only the other night I was listening to the broadcasters, Vin Scully and Jerry Doggett. Now, broadcasting a Dodger game is like trying to cook a meal out of seeds and crumbs. You sometimes have to make one run do for a whole week. You have to substitute the spine-tingling excitement of a new pitcher warming up for the more mundane sounds of doubles, triples, home runs, and seven-run rallies.

Objects To Today's Nomenclature

But what I really object to is the nomenclature of today's game. I find myself answering the radio or television back. I feel like a translator at the U.N. For instance, here is a typical night's exchange with the voice of the broadcaster:

Radio: "There's a sidearm curve ball . . ."

Me (in a rage): "Sidearm curve ball!? Vinnie, dammit, that's a roundhouse! Billy Ambrose had the best roundhouse on the block. He also had the longest arms found on a non-simian. His roundhouse began at third base and crossed the plate (if it ever did) at seven o'clock high. You couldn't reach it with a 10-foot pole."

Radio: "Willie was bailing out on that pitch . . ."

Me: "Rats! He was putting his foot in the bucket, do you hear? Repeat after me, 'He was putting his foot in the bucket, he was putting . . .' "

It's Not A Curve, It's A Hook

Radio: "John has a really fine curve ball tonight . . ."

Me: "A hook, Vinnie! That's a 'hook.' And you call the pitcher who's got a good one 'hooks' as in 'hooks' Kelly."

Radio: "Regan throws a sinker . . ."

Me: "A 'drop,' baby. A 'sinker' is a donut to my generation."

Radio: "There's a 'change-up' . . ."

Me: "Boy, does THAT ever make Olsen mad! That, sir, is no 'change-up' that's the 'slow ball' or even the 'fadeaway.' No wonder attendance is slipping!"

Radio: "A curve that breaks down into a right-handed hitter . . ."

Me: "The 'in-shoot,' Jerry, the simple old ever-lovin' inshoot. Frank Merriwell thought it up. Bart Hodge was the only guy who could catch it."

Radio: "And Maury is in a rundown . . ."

He's In Hot Box, Or A Pickle

Me (sighing resignedly): "He's in the 'hot box,' dag nab it! Or, he's in 'a pickle.' A rundown is going over the lineup with a pencil."

Radio: "It's a 'slider' on the outside corner . . ."

Me: "Nickel curve."

A "Texas leaguer" is a "hump-backed line drive," today. When we got a short fly to left, we used to call it a "can o' corn." Today, the announcer says, "There's a high fly to deep left — it's playable."

Shucks, they never even say "a three-bagger," anymore. It's a "triple," nowadays, for cryin' out loud! When a ball hit a guy in the ear, we used to call it a "beanball." It's a "brush-back" or "it got away from him," in today's calling.

It's not a "fine running catch," it's a "circus catch." And be sure to bring back redundancy: "Powerful slugger," "dependable mainstay," "all-time immortal," and "fiery spark plug." Let's get the game back on an understandable basis where a homerun is NOT "it's gone!" but "it's outta da lot!"

Player Leads Colonial

FORT WORTH, Tex. (UPI)—Gary Player turned his weakness into a strong point in the second round of the Colonial National Invitation Golf Tournament and moved to one stroke in front of the pack today.

The little South African, who shot a 34-34-68 yesterday, probably will get his wish that the sun comes out today, but his wish sounded a bit ironic in the face of the play that left him with a two-under-par 138 and a one-stroke edge over Billy Casper after 36 holes on a damp course.

Player, who has been in the top 10 in seven of the nine tournaments he's played in this country this year, said playing on wet grass is one of the weaknesses of his game.

"I don't care how talented a player is," the Johannesburg native said, "it is impossible not to keep the ball from sailing out of the wet grass because of the overspin."

On yesterday's tour of Colonial's 7,136-yard, par 35-35-70 layout, Player compensated for the sailing tendency which had bothered him under similar wet conditions on opening day when he shot a 70.

He had some words of praise for George Archer and a pair of fellow South Africans, brother-in-law Bob Verwey and Harold Henning, who gave him a putting lesson before the tourney started.

"I'm still very grateful for their tip on what I was doing wrong," Player said.

His putting showed it again yesterday when he had birdie putts of 8, 10, 6 and 8 feet.

Defending champion Dave Stockton, who made the turn in one under said, "I thought everything was going to be good again. But I let it slip a little today. Maybe I was getting tired."

He took bogeys at the closing two holes for a 72 but pointed out with a grin, "That's not too far back." He recalled that he humbled the wicked 7,000-yard Colonial course last year with back-to-back rounds of 65 and 66.

McCovey Goes Down, Out, In Blaze Of Clutch Glory

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Willie McCovey will be lost to the San Francisco Giants for 10 days with a spike wound, but the slugging first baseman went out in a blaze of glory last night.

McCovey's run-scoring double in the first inning started left-hander Ray Sadecki to a three-hit, 2-0 victory over the Chicago Cubs—the Giants' fourth consecutive win.

McCovey doubled after Willie Mays walked with two out. The first baseman, the National League's home-run leader with nine, then was trapped and spiked by third baseman Ron Santo in a rundown.

He was rushed to St. Luke's Hospital where 20 stitches were required to close the deep gash. "It was about a half-inch from his achilles tendon," said trainer Leo Hughes. "He'll be out about 10 days."

The loss of McCovey added to the Giants' swiftly mounting injury list. Jim Ray Hart is out with a bruised hand. Ollie Brown has an injured finger and Ron Hunt was scratched from the starting lineup with a sore shoulder.

"Hart should be ready in a day or so," reported Hughes. "Hunt's all right and Brown will be okay in about three or four days."

Santo explained the first-inning mishap: "I was going full-speed and McCovey sort of faked me out. I guess I tripped over him. He was off to such a great start—I feel terrible."

Sadecki is far ahead of his 1967 timetable, thanks to a large helping of confidence he needed so badly when he joined the San Francisco Giants two years ago.

Twice the Cubs loaded the bags and twice he got out of the frame.

"I felt real good all the way and that extra confidence in knowing I could put the ball where I wanted it helped" Sadecki said afterward. "My curve wasn't very good in the first inning but it improved as the game went along. It's nice to win a close one as I've also lost a couple that way."

The Cubs loaded the bags in the first only to have Sadecki strike out Lou Johnson on what the lefty called "a bad curve ball." Then he made pinch hitter John Boccabella of San Anselmo fly out to end another bases loaded threat in the seventh.

No-Hitter By A Bulldog

Last-place San Rafael gained some lost glory, first-place Terra Linda gained another tight victory, and second-place Novato kept alive in the down-to-wire prep baseball race yesterday.

Chris Rowland of San Rafael, a heretofore undistinguished pitcher-outfielder, pitched the Marin County Athletic League's first no-hitter of 1968, allowing Marin Catholic only three walks in a 5-0 victory.

Rowland, who struck out six, had just one ball hit that could have cost him his no-hitter. A hard-hit ground ball in the third was bobbled for an error. Rowland faced just 22 men, one over the minimum, as San Rafael made two errors behind him and a man was picked off base.

League-leading Terra Linda and second-place Novato set up their season-ending pennant duel Tuesday with two-hit wins, the Trojans scratching out a clever run to edge gutty Drake 1-0 behind Mike Timmel, now a rubber-armed 9-0, and the Hornets ripping off six runs in the first inning to cow Tamalpais, eventually winning 8-2 as Russ Dillon survived early control problems to strike out nine.

Terra Linda got its run in the fifth, with two out. Steve Trono got on on a fielder's choice, Mark Buckley singled, with Trono going to third, and was thrown out stealing for the second out. Dave Edson walked and broke for second as the pitcher threw to the plate. The ball went to first, to second — and then home, too late to catch Trono, roaring in from third.

As usual, Novato was potent at bat, getting six first-inning runs on six hits and an error After Mark Newsom reached base on an error and Gary Moore went out, Tom Thomas, Barry Beringer, Dave Zechlin, Bob Tait, Jeff Moats, and Russ Dillon singled. Dillon got two out in the second, then got sloppy, allowing a walk, a hit, and three more walks before retiring the side. That was Tam's last hurrah, however.

San Rafael gave Rowland what turned out to be an overkill of support in the first, scoring four runs. Larry Nelson walked, Dave Olbrantz hit a two-run homer over the leftfield wall, Rafael Gallardo singled, and pitcher Mark Carbone made two errors on a ground ball by Roger Thomas, Gallardo scoring and Thomas taking second. Red Stevens then hit a ground-rule double to score the Bulldogs' fourth run.

Dahl In Successful Steeplechase Return

BERKELEY (AP)—Rod Dahl, a frustrated middle distance runner representing Washington State, won the Pacific-8 steeplechase—an event h quit in disgust two yars ago.

Dahl, a miler and hurdler at Bellingham, Wash., High School, tried distances from 440 yards to three miles for two years at WSU and never won a race.

He also ran two steeplechases —a 3,000-meter hurdling splash —in his sophomore year, 1966.

"I ran it twice and gave up," he said, after winning yesterday's only final event in the Pacific-8 ninth annual track and field championships.

This spring, unsuccessful elsewhere, he tried again and ran it twice. On April 27 in a dual meet with Southern California, he pulled a muscle.

He rested, then ran second last week to Washington's John Celms in the Northern Division meet at Corvallis, Ore.

Yesterday, he let Celms lead from the start until near the finish, then won a photo finish so close both were given the same time, 9:02.6. It was only Dahl's fifth steeplechase.

Southern California's Earl McCullouch flashed over the 120-yard high hurdles in 13.4 to break the 13.5 Pacific-8 record set by Ron Copeland of UCLA last year.

California's Lou Kirtman had the fourth best qualifying time in that event, 14.0, breaking the 14.1 school record in 1935 by Tom Moore at the West Coast Relays.

Moore, a veteran race starter and sponsor of the Modesto Relays, started Kirtman's heat.

"Moore takes off his hat to Kirtman," the public address system blared.

"I'm glad he did it," said Moore of Kirtman. His 14.1 was a world record when Moore ran it.

National champion Southern California, defending Pacific-8 champion Oregon and Oregon State fought today for the title.

Oregon took the early lead with 13 points by placing third, fourth, fifth and sixth in the steeplechase. Washington State's first gave the Cougars 10 points and Washington got 8 for second on the 10-8-6-4-2-1 scoring system.

Oregon State qualified 15 men and Southern California and California, 14 each. UCLA had 12 qualifiers, WSU nine, Oregon and Washington eight, and Stanford three.

San Rafael Nine Takes To Road

The Litchfield Braves, sporting a fat 4-0 record in practice games, take to the road for two more games this weekend.

The Braves take on the Marysville Giants at 8 p.m. today in Marysville, then travel to El Cerrito tomorrow for a game against California State champs Hatzell Radio at 2 p.m.

Outfielder Doug Wilson and shortstop Tom Corder with chunky .667 batting averages lead the Braves.

McGraw Ruins Nash

CHICAGO (AP)—Bleary-eyed Tommie McCraw, swinging a heavy bat despite a heavy heart, smashed Jim Nash and the Oakland A's last night to lift the Chicago White Sox out of the American League cellar.

McCraw belted a two-out triple in the seventh inning to spoil Nash's bid for a no-hitter and then collected the second hit off the Oakland righthander by leading off the 10th with another triple.

Nash battled the Sox down to two outs and a bases-loaded situation after McCraw's triple but finally yielded a 1-0 decision when pinch batter Duane Josephson singled to end the contest.

Only then was it learned that McCraw had spent a sleepless night because of his 21-month-old son, Bryan.

A week ago, Bryan received second degree burns on the face from a hot iron and then on Thursday night the tiny tot fell and split his lip.

Daddy McCraw spent much of the night with his crying son and got little sleep.

Sox Manager Eddie Stanky, a militant family man, learned of the situation and asked McCraw if he would rather not play yesterday.

But McCraw wanted to play. So he bypassed batting practice and spent the time catching a few winks on the training table.

"Oh, it was just one of those nights," said McCraw. "I'd be sleeping a half hour and awake the next half hour. The poor baby was really suffering. But the doctors tell me he's going to be okay and that's all that counts. They tell me he won't even have any scars."

McCraw, who has gone from a 32-ounce bat to a 34-ounce weapon, tripled in the seventh to ruin Nash's bid for a no-hitter and then led off the 10th with another triple as Nash and Joe Horlen were tied in a brilliant pitching duel.

Nash fanned Russ Snyder and then walked the next two batters to load the bases. Pinch batter Tommy Davis s became Nash's 13th strikeout victim before Josephson singled to give the Sox their ninth victory in 12 games and pull them out of the cellar for the first time this season.

Tiant String Broken In AL Spoiler Night

By ASSOCIATED PRESS

Luis Tiant blew his date with the record book and Frank Howard had his record-breaker spoiled, in a spoilers night.

Tiant's string of four consecutive shutouts and 41 scoreless innings was shattered by Boog Powell's three-run homer in the sixth inning last night and Baltimore beat Cleveland 6-2.

Howard set a major league record with his eighth homer in the last five games and 15th of the season giving Washington a one-run lead in the ninth inning. But Detroit beat the Senators 7-3 when Jim Northrup cracked a grand slam home run in the bottom half of the inning.

In other American League games, Boston rallied for the fourth straight game and topped New York 6-4 and California's game at Minnesota was postponed by rain after 3½ innings of hitless pitching by the Twins' Jim Perry and the Angels' Rickey Clark.

Tiant was gunning for the major league record of five straight shutouts set in 1904 by Doc White of the White Sox. And it seemed he might get it when he pitched his way out of a bases-loaded, one-out jam in the fifth inning, protecting a 1-0 lead.

After he struck out Dave Johnson opening the sixth, Curt Blefary walked, Frank Robinson grounded to Larry Brown, but Chico Salmon dropped Brown's throw at second and both runners were safe. A wild pitch advanced them to second and third and then Powell connected.

Curt Motton's pinch three-run homer wrapped it up for the Orioles in the eighth. It was the second straight pinch three-run homer for the rookie outfielder.

Detroit's Joe Sparma was nursing a 2-1 lead and a one-hitter going into the ninth against the Senators. But Del Unser opened with a single and Howard homered.

The record of seven homers in five constcutive games was shared by Babe Ruth, who did it in 1921, Jim Bottomley in 1929 and Vic Wertz in 1950.

The Tigers bounced right back, tying the score on pinch hitter Jim Price's single and then winning the game on the fourth grand slam of Northrup's career.

The Red Sox won their sixth straight game—the fourth with a comeback rally—and dropped the Yankees into the American League cellar.

Boston tied the game at 4-4 with a pair of runs in the seventh against ex-teammate Bill Monbouquette and then won it in the eighth on run-scoring singles by George Scott and Rico Petrocelli.

The Minnesota rain washed out eight strikeouts in four hitless innings by Jim Perry of the Twins.

Weiskopf Passes Army Physical

CLEVELAND (AP) — Tom Weiskopf, currently leading the Professional Golfers Association tour money winners with $80,000, took his Army physical Friday and said: "they told me I passed."

Weiskopf, 25, of suburban Bedford added: "They told me it would be at least two weeks before I received my papers, but it could be as long as three or four months. After that, I'd have 21 days."

The young pro said he was not complaining about his possible induction, "but it is a little discouraging since I'm just reaching my goals. You know, if I were to win the U.S. Open it could mean as much as a million dollars in the next three years with endorsements and everything."

"But this is something everyone has to do," he added. "It's an obligation we all have to fulfill."

Redwood Raps Berkeley, 12-3

Redwood High's baseball team, out of the Marin County Athletic League race, vented some of its frustration on the Berkeley High Hornets in Berkeley yesterday, walloping the home team 12-3.

The Giants, led by Kenny Johnson's three-for-five at the plate, ran up six runs in the first three innings to put the game away early. Don Mantooth and Tom Wickert scattered eight hits and struck out 11, while receiving errorless support in the field. Keith Valk and Johnson had home runs for Redwood, while Tito Diaz doubled and batted in two runs.

Whip-Lash Laver Crushes Emerson In 39 Minutes

NEW YORK (AP) — Top-seeded Rod Laver, facing an old Australian rival for the first time in six years, crushed Roy Emerson 6-2, 6-2 in 39 minutes last night and went into the men's final against Ken Rosewall in the $30,000 Madison Square Garden Invitation Tennis Tournament.

The two undersized Aussies clash tonight for the $7,000 first prize. Rosewall rallied for an exciting 8-10, 6-3, 7-5 victory over Andres Gimeno of Spain.

In the women's final, with $2,000 at stake, Billie Jean King of Berkeley, Calif., will play her old rival, Ann Haydon Jones of Britain. Mrs. King had too much pace for Francoise Durr of France 6-1, 6-3. Mrs. Jones beat Rosemary Casals of San Francisco 6-1, 7-5. Miss Casals double-faulted at match point.

A crowd of 9,153 turned out for the semifinal matches among the world's top professional tennis players.

Emerson, who beat Laver for the Australian title in 1961, proved no match for the 150-pound left-hander, whose game has been honed by five years on the tough pro tour.

Laver was so powerful that he never lost a service and he broke Emerson two times in each set.

He climaxed his victory with a slashing forehand down the sideline. Emerson swung at the ball but failed to get a piece of it.

Most Three-Pointers

MINNEAPOLIS (UPI)—Les Selvage of the Anaheim Amigos set American Basketball Association records by attempting 26 three-point field goals and converting 10 of them in a game against Denver this year.

Hamilton Boxers In Finals

Representatives of Marin's Hamilton Air Force Base will headline tonight's Western Regional Olympic Trials at Winterland Arena in San Francisco.

Five Hamilton pugilists, proteges of Hamilton and U.S. Olympic coach Bill Ross, will participate in the 11 finals contested tonight. The winners in each division will go on to the final Olympic trials in September at Toledo, Ohio.

Top Hamilton entry is 178-pound Formus White, who knocked out James Dick of Los Angeles last night and will meet Jesse Byrd, a San Francisco policeman. Other Hamilton finalists are Vince Neratka, who faces Andre Reed of Los Angeles for the 140-pound title; Pat Neely, who fights Ray Lunny of Redwood City in the 112's; Dean Kromarek, matched with Danny Alemeida of Montebello at 125; and Mike Taylor, who goes against Mike Ortiz of Las Cruces, N.M., for the 132-pound title.

Clippers Squeak On Penalty Kick

OAKLAND (AP) — Ilia Mitic scored on a penalty kick with 3:20 remaining to give the Oakland Clippers a comeback 3-2 win over San Diego in a North American Soccer League match before 6,122 last night.

The Clippers trailed 2-0 at halftime on two penalty kicks by Pepe Fernandez, who scored his 12th and 13th goals and now leads the NASL with 29 points. Milan Cop scored the first Clipper goal in the 67th minute and Dave Davidovic tied the score in the 80th minute.

Preakness Paints Are Ready

BALTIMORE (AP) — Tommy Ennis' paints were ready. Today was Preakness Day at Pimlico.

Situated in the track's infield atop a replica of the burned-down members' clubhouse is a weathervane shaped like a jockey on a horse.

Each year the racing colors of the winning Preakness owner are painted on the jockey, where they remain until there is a new winner. That is Ennis' job.

Post time for today's 93rd running of the 1 3-16-mile, $150,000-added classic was 2:30 p.m., PCT.

EXPERIENCE

Of the 10 3-year-olds entered, only three ran in the Kentucky Derby—Dancer's Image, Forward Pass and Jig Time.

Ennis has had seven years' experience at his paint job, which takes about two minutes to complete. The hardest part is getting ready for it, not because of the quantity of paint needed but because of the various colors and shades.

"I usually have to mix 15 or 20 colors, and I wind up using three of them usually," Ennis said. "Of course, I never know which ones."

SILK LIST

The colors of racing silks, which seldom are solid, range from brown to fawn to sky blue to devils red.

Almost as essential to Ennis as a paint brush, is a list of the colors of the silks for quick reference at the end of a race.

Not only is the painting of the weather vane done only at the Preakness, it is the only race in which the flowers that make up the blanket thrown over the withers of the winning horse also are painted.

The blanket is supposed to consist of black-eyed susans, the Maryland state flower, but they aren't in bloom in Maryland in May.

So, each year, a Baltimore area florist takes thousands of daisies and dyes the centers black with shoe polish.

The champagne was ready, too. Another Preakness custom is that the Pimlico management send a case of imported champagne to the barn of the winner.

White Clinches Roommate Duel

By United Press International

Bob Gibson and Bill White acted like a couple of roommates last night. They traded insults.

But it was White who got the last laugh with the game-winning hit as the Philadelphia Phillies edged the league-leading St. Louis Cardinals 1-0 in 10 innings.

Gibson and White roomed together when they were teammates at St. Louis and Gibson needled his old teammate in the eighth inning when he intentionally walked John Callison to bring White up — and then retired him.

It worked so well the first time that Gibson again walked Callison intentionally in the 10th to bring White up. Callison had gotten two hits in three trips before Gibson walked him twice while White was hitless in his first four at bats.

"It was embarrassing. It was like getting knocked down twice —and then you have to get up and keep on fighting," White said.

White, though, finally got the best of his old roomie as he stroked a single to score Woody Fryman from second base and end the game.

Elsewhere in the National League, Atlanta topped New York 3-1 in 16 innings, San Francisco blanked Chicago 2-0, Los Angeles whitewashed Houston 6-0 and Cincinnati nipped Pittsburgh 3-2.

Atlanta erupted for two runs with two out in the 16th to finally end a pitchers' duel. The Mets got four hits, and only one in the last 10 innings. Pat Jarvis started and Jim Britton came on in the 12th and got the victory. Hank Aaron began the rally against Danny Frisella by walking and stealing second. Deron Johnson then singled Aaron home and Felipe Alou followed with a double, scoring Johnson.

A third inning homer by Lee May carried the Reds past Pittsburgh. The solo homer, May's fourth of the season, gave the Reds a 3-0 lead and proved to be the deciding run when the Pirates knocked out Cincinnati starter Jim Maloney with a two-run outburst in the sixth. Bob Lee stopped the rally and Ted Davidson pitched the seventh for the Reds. Ted Abernathy then went the last two to nail down the triumph. Al McBean started and took the loss for Pittsburgh.

By Holding Ace Of Diamonds In Dummy, Three No Trump Makeable

The blue bower bird of Australia is careful to steal only from his friends. Since birds like that would feel right at home with us, I am raising funds to give them bridge lessons. Send donations to this column, earmarking them for our Australian friends.

STRANGE PLAY

West opened ten of diamonds, and declarer won in dummy with the ace of diamonds in order to lead a spade for a finesse with the queen. This was a strange line of play for a man who had never been either a bird or an Australian.

West won with the king of spades and led another diamond. South won and hopefully led the ace of spades. The jack didn't drop, and South eventually took his eight tricks and gave up the ghost.

South had stolen only from his partner by the way he played the hand. There was no need to hope for good luck in spades since the contract was safe against any defense.

SET UP TRICK

South should set up a spade trick in dummy, keeping the ace of diamonds as an eventual entry to that trick. Declarer wins the first diamond in his hand, cashes the ace of spades and then leads the queen of spades to West's king.

West leads another diamond (as good a defense as any), and South must again win in his own hand. South gives up a spade to the jack, and can win the next diamond in dummy to cash the ten of spades. He is then sure of four diamonds, two spades, two hearts and one club.

TOO HASTY

South might have made his contract if he had led a low club instead of hastily cashing the ace of spades, but the line of play is very complicated.

Sure, simple plays are best.

DAILY QUESTION

Partner opens with 2-no trump (22 to 24 points), and the next player passes.

You hold:
♠—K J 8
♥—Q 6
♦—10 9 8 7 4
♣—K 6 4

What do you say?

Answer: Bid 4-no trump.

This asks partner to bid a slam with 24 points but to pass with only 22. With 23 points he may use his judgment.

Days Of County Government Going

MONTGOMERY, Ala. (UPI) —Lt. Gov. Albert Brewer says county governments are in danger of dying.

"They are going to have to strengthen or die," he said. "They are slipping behind in trying to maintain services." Brewer said county commissioners are no longer just road commissioners, but are asked for libraries, water and sewer facilities, schools, hospitals, garbage collection, development and zoning.

ALMANAC

Today is Saturday, May 18, the 139th day of 1968 with 227 to follow.

The moon is between its full phase and last quarter. The morning stars are Jupiter and Mercury.

On this day in history:

In 1852 Massachusetts became the first state to make school attendance compulsory for children between the ages of 8 and 14.

In 1860 Abraham Lincoln was nominated for president by Republicans meeting in Chicago.

In 1941 communities throughout the nation celebrated "I Am an American Day" to honor the 300,000 aliens who had become naturalized citizens during the last year.

In 1953 American aviatrix Jacqueline Cochran became the first American woman to fly faster than the speed of sound when she averaged just over 652 miles per hour in an F-86 Sabre jet.

A thought for the day — Spanish novelist Miguel do Cervantes said, "That's the nature of women—not to love when we love them, and to love when we love them not."

TIME AND TIDE

Department of Commerce, United States Coast Geodetic Survey. Times and heights of tides at San Francisco (Golden Gate):

The column of heights gives the elevation in feet of each tide above or below the plane of Coast Survey chart soundings. The depths are always additive to the chart depths unless preceded by a minus sign (-), when the numbers are subtracted from the depth given in the chart. Light-face type indicates a.m. times; bold-face type indicates p.m. times.

Protection Of Pope Proves A Security Nightmare

VATICAN CITY (UPI)—Pope Paul VI's trip to Bogota, Colombia, in August is certain to be a security man's nightmare—as are all papal trips.

The scores of thousands of persons who always want to see the pontiff—who try to reach out to touch him or seek his blessing—pose the most worrisome danger to his person.

In the Holy Land in 1964, he was almost crushed in one frightening outburst of public adulation.

The Vatican itself has no security force, as such. Pope Paul is probably unique among heads of state in that he has no secret service or other trained personnel to guard his life.

Problems of security on this journey—to attend the closing of a world eucharistic congress and to open a general conference of Latin American bishops—will rest mostly with the Colombian government rather than the Vatican.

During his visit, the Pope will be flanked on most occasions by four burly members of the pontifical gendarmes to keep crowds from pressing in too closely upon him. But that's all. The gendarmes have no extensive police training, go unarmed and probably would not be able to deal effectively with either uncontrolled mob scenes or an attempt on Pope Paul's life.

In the Vatican itself he has virtually no protection. "Anyone could walk into one of the Pope's general audiences and shoot him without much difficulty," a Vatican official told UPI. "But the Pope never worries about his own safety. He puts his trust in Divine Providence."

On his first trip abroad, to the Holy Land in 1964, there were some fears for the Pope's life because of the explosive political climate of the Middle East. That time, the Italian government persuaded Pope Paul to allow some of its top secret service agents to go along and guard him discreetly.

There were no attempts to harm the pontiff but he was endangered by the almost hysterical receptions given him by masses of people. His nearest escape came when he walked through the narrow Via Dolorosa in Jerusalem hemmed in and roughly jostled by excited masses of people. He came out of the experience unharmed but obviously shaken.

Italian government agents also went along for the Pope's trip to Bombay, India, later in 1964. But since then—on trips to the United Nations, Portugal and Turkey—the pope's security has been entrusted to local authorities, as will be the case in Colombia.

Paul is a rather shy man, but he enjoys huge crowds and does not hesitate to mingle with the people in them. That, of course, complicates the security problem.

It is assumed at the Vatican that Colombian authorities will take special precautions to safeguard their distinguished visitor. But there have been no contacts between the Vatican and the Colombian government on this question, nor are there likely to be any, Vatican sources said.

Intensive planning for the Pope's trip began a few weeks before he announced on May 8 that he was going to Bogota. Before the announcement, the Pope sent his personal secretary, Msgr. Pasquale Macchi, on an unannounced trip to Bogota to discuss arrangements with local church and civic authorities and to select a place for the pontiff to stay while he is there.

Unlike some world figures, Paul does not travel with a large entourage. Even on trips around Rome he restricts the number of persons accompanying him to the minimum necessary and he has followed the same practice when going abroad.

No more than 15 persons from the Vatican are expected to go to Bogota. The chiefs ones will be Amleto Cardinal Cicognani, the 85-year-old Secretary of State who has accompanied the Pope on all his trips, and Antonio Cardinal Samore, president of the pontifical commission for Latin America.

The Pope's personal physician, Dr. Mario Fontana of Rome, also will be a member of the entourage.

The party also will include one Spanish-speaking priest. Even though the Pope speaks Spanish, and will make his speeches in Bogota in that language, he will take a translator in case of any difficulties.

There is some speculation in the Vatican he may assign this task to Msgr. Gabriel Montalvo of Bogota, son of Dr. Jose Antonio Montalvo, the Colombian ambassador to the Holy See.

Msgr. Montalvo is a young expert on Polish affairs in the Vatican secretariat of state.

"Would Your Child Use Drugs" is the subject of a symposium to be held at 7:30 p.m. tomorrow at Temple Rodef Sholom, 170 North San Pedro Road, San Rafael.

Speakers will be Guy Bachelis of the Switchboard of Marin; Dr. Arthur B. Carfagni of the Haight-Ashbury clinical advisory board, San Francisco; Ross Carter, superintendent of the Whisman School District, Mountain View.

Also Fred Latty, director of field services, Marin County Probation Department, and Jack Williams, a psychologist in Kentfield schools.

The symposium is being sponsored by Aldersgate Methodist Church, Christ Presbyterian, Congregation Rodof Sholom, Church of the Nativity (Episcopal), Faith Lutheran, First Congregational, Marin Fellowship of Unitarians, Santa Venetia Presbyterian and St. Isabella's Parish.

According to a spokesman for the sponsors, the symposium is the outgrowth of the churches' concern of problems facing the youth of Marin.

Stewardship Takes On New Meaning

By GEORGE W. CORNELL

NEW YORK (AP) — Ever since Jesus told the parable of the "faithful steward" who multiplied his holdings by actively investing them, "stewardship" has been a standard churchly term, bringing up images of budgets, pledge cards and collection plates.

But in an era when Christianity is seeking increasingly to wield an influence in the world at large, the use of human resources in that cause is viewed in a considerably wider perspective.

STEWARDSHIP

"The idea of stewardship is much broader in its meaning and application to total life than its traditional use has indicated," says a new Methodist interpretation.

Previously, "an emphasis on the giving of money has usually claimed the limelight," the statement says, but adds that the concept, in its fuller sense, applies to "all of life."

Adopted by the recently merged United Methodist Church as a basic guiding document, it sees man as a "co-creator with God" in the continuing development of the world.

In that role, man is described as having been given, free and gratis, the main "raw materials" for carrying on his task—the gifts of time, talent and the world itself to tend and improve.

"Fill the earth and subdue it," goes the divine mandate in Gen. 1. "And have dominion over . . . every living thing that moves upon the earth." Again, in Gen. 2, man is told in the garden to "till it and keep it."

SPECIAL STUDY

Prepared by a special commission over a four-year period, the document notes that the word, "stewardship," stems from the Greek word, "oikonomia," which means the "administration of a house," and adds: "The Biblical concept includes the idea that God is the architect of an entire new household. To be included in this household means to participate in the new life which emerges from God's constant process of creation."

Thus stewardship is defined as "man's recognition of God's sovereignty through creation and is a grateful response to God's manifold gifts"—of abilities, time, the earth, its produce and life itself.

It calls for "dedicated and creative use of all these gifts" and "worthy administration of all resources available for the sustenance and enrichment of life," the statement says.

It adds: "The only appropriate response of man to the grace of God is to cooperate with God in fulfilling His will.

"Such a commitment to vocation brings the Christian's life into the stream of God's purpose so that the spirit of God flows through him in blessing to the world.

"The Christian steward accepts his life, including his talents, his time, his power and influence, as a trust from God and seeks to develop these to the fullest . . .

CHILD OF GOD

"He accepts every person as a child of God, worthy of dignity and respect . . .

"He accepts the church, as the fellowship of the committed ones, as a trust from God, and seeks to assure through this fellowship the extension of God's mission into the community and into the world.

"He accepts material resources as a trust from God and seeks to use these resources to give evidence of God's bounty in the world.

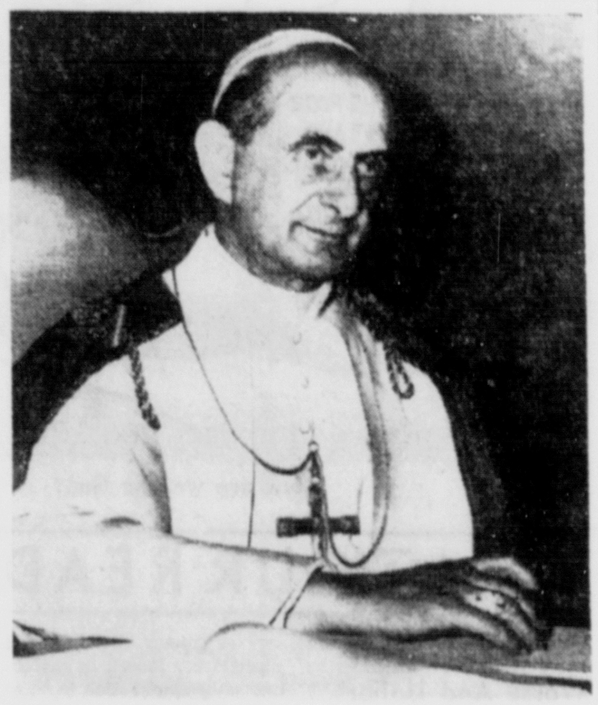
"He uses the power of this wealth for the purposes of God. He strives to increase the productivity of the world and to make it possible for others to share in this bounty."

Seminary Will Host Career Day Next Saturday

St. Peter Chanel Seminary will be the setting next Saturday for a Christian Career Day for seventh and eighth grade Catholic students.

Sponsored by the Marin County Vocation Committee, the Marist Fathers and the Serra Club, events will include discussions, outdoor activities and a concelebrated Folk Mass.

Propose of the day is to acquaint youths with the modernized, updated life and activities of the Catholic seminary high schools of the Archdiocese of San Francisco.



SECURITY A PROBLEM — When Pope Paul IV flies to Bogota, Colombia, in August, one of the biggest problems will be his security — a problem which has been a nightmare on previous trips by His Holiness outside the Vatican.

Has 'Compassion Fatigue' Dulled Sympathy Role?

By LOUIS CASSELS
U.P. International

"Let us not become tired of doing good."

St. Paul addressed that admonition to Christians in Galatia 19 centuries ago.

It could be appropriately redressed to contemporary Americans of all faiths.

A perceptive observer said recently that a great many Americans who are essentially kind an decent folk seen to be suffering from "compassion fatigue."

'GOOD PHRASE'

It's a good phrae. Think on it for a minute.

Webster defines compassion as "sympathetic consciousness of others' distress, together with a desire to alleviate it." if you feel sorry for a person in need, that's pity. If you care enough about his troubles to try to help, that's compassion.

Fatigue is defined as "weariness from exertion . . . the temporary loss of power to respond induced by continued stimulation."

Compassion fatigue, therefore, is a condition in which your capacity for sympthy has been exhausted by overuse.

When you consider all of the human suffering — at home and abroad — to which American men of good will have tried to respond during the past quarter century, it is not very surprising that some of them are beginning to display symtoms of compassion fatigue.

Among the external symptoms, two in particular are noteworthy.

CURTAIL FUNDS

The first is a tendency to curtail contributions to worthy causes. You find yourself saying no to people who ask you to give money or time to help others.

The second is a growing readiness to accept any explanation of human misery which implies that the poor and oppressed have no one to blame but themselves.

You don't have to worry about how human beings can live on $50 a month in public assistance if you can believe that everyone on the welfare rolls is a deadbeat who's too lazy to work.

Like most ailments, spiritual and physical, compassion fatigue is easier to diagnose than to treat.

New Catholic Stand Regarding Masonry?

VATICAN CITY (UPI)—The Vatican now takes the stand that it is "possible but not advisable" for Roman Catholics to join Masonic lodges in countries where the Masons are not anti-Catholic.

Informed Vatican sources gave this clarification of the church position because of some confusion in various parts of the world regarding the issue.

WORD LEAKS

Two months ago, word leaked out that the Vatican had adopted a new attitude and was no longer applying in every case an old law automatically excommunicating Catholics who join the Order of Free Masons.

Since then, the report has been periodically challenged in various parts of the world. Even some Catholic officials have said they know of no new attitude on the part of the Vatican.

The confusion apparently arises from the fact the new attitude remains almost a private matter within the powerful Congregation for the Doctrine of the Faith, according to well-informed sources.

They said the new attitude became known several months ago when a Scandinavian bishop wrote to the Congregation, the former Holy Office, to ask if a Catholic could join the Masons without incurring automatic excommunication.

PRIVATE REPLY

The congregation replied to the bishop with a private letter, the sources said.

The reply stated that if the Masonic organization in a particular country is not anti-Roman Catholic or atheistic, "It is possible but not advisable for a Catholic" to join, the sources said.

They said the Congregation regards Masonic membership for Catholics as inadvisable because of the "secret nature" of the Masonic lodges. On the other hand, the Congregation takes a favorable view of the charitable activities of many Masonic lodges, they said.

The sources said the effect of this letter was to make Catholic membership in the Masons "possible but not advisable" in the United States, England, the Scandinavian countries and a few other places.

NO INSTRUCTIONS

However, in Italy, France, Spain, and Latin America, where Masonic orders are regarded by the church as anti-Catholic, "the old condemnation remains in effect," they said.

The sources said the Congregation's private letter to the Scandinavian bishop is still the only official document on the subject and no instructions have been sent to bishops elsewhere.

Publicly, the Vatican has only said that it is not considering "profound changes" in canon law on the subject of membership in the Masons.

Miller Scores Victory For Local School Control

A three-year battle culminated in victory — of a sort — this week for State Sen. George Miller Jr., D-Martinez, and proponents of "home rule" for California's school districts.

The Assembly, without a dissenting vote, passed Miller's SB 1, to known officially as the George Miller Jr. Act of 1968. This is the bill that reduces a long list of state-mandated courses in high schools and junior high schools to a few basics.

As passed by the Senate, however, it includes an amendment which its author swallowed with difficulty. The Senate promptly concurred in the amendment. The measure will go to Gov. Ronald Reagan for what appears to be certain signature.

SCHOOL BOARDS and parents should to thank Senator Miller for the measure. But the amendment it contains is virtually the same as that which caused the author to withdraw the bill in the closing days of last year's legislative session.

The amendment is a tribute to a powerful and almost -invisible lobby, made up of coaches, physical education teachers, some principals and superintendents, and recruiters for college and professional sports — and with strong backing inside the California Department of Education.

It requires that high school students receive 400 minutes of physical education instruction each 10 school days, and junior high students receive 200 minutes.

This is but a slight retreat from the "one full class period of physical education instruction each school day" long mandated by California law. About its only advantage is that it makes possible flexible scheduling through longer "P.E." periods on some days and shorter periods or none) on others.

ASIDE FROM physical education, the only courses mandated by the state under Miller's bill are basic courses in English, mathematics, and history. Gone are the requirements in junior high and high school about such a variety of subjects as safety, driver education, narcotics, California history, etc., etc.—in all, about two dozen state-ordered studies which have made curriculum planning and class scheduling a nightmare for California school administrators.

As a check to make sure no district throws all the essentials out the window and goes in for some sort of amorphous nothingness in place of education, the bill provides that each school district must file a curriculum schedule with the county board of education.

THE MEASURE thus puts control of what is taught in the schools pretty much back where it was a long time ago: with the counties and the school districts. And it removes the often-heard complaint that state mandates make sensible scheduling and curriculum construction difficult and sometimes impossible (which they do).

Assemblyman John T. Knox, D-Richmond, predicted Miller's measure "probably will revolutionize education in California."

Assemblyman Winfield A. Shoemaker, D-Lompoc, however, warned: "This could open the doors to a political blood bath for every school board election."

To this, Miller responded: "What's wrong with blood baths? If we're for local control, let's do it."

Amen!

GOLDEN GATE REVIEW

For Political Cynicism, Consider This Memorandum To Assembly

By PAUL E. PETERZELL

Politics has a rather seedy image to much of the citizenry — and sometimes it's no wonder.

For an example of cynical indifference, take a look at a memorandum, prepared by a consultant to California Assembly Republicans, on "proposed legislation relating to integration."

"Recent events, including the Kerner Report and the death of Dr. Martin Luther King, suggest that some kind of measure relating to integration of schools would be more than appropriate," wrote the consultant.

"In terms of election year politics, the GOP could stand to improve its image and its record in this regard."

HE PROPOSED legislation to appropriate $750,000 to help school districts to integrate. Even this amount "could be reduced somewhat," he said.

"The legislation would be extremely difficult for any Democrat member to oppose, yet easy for Republicans to support due to its permissive nature," he continuted. "The governor would have difficulty with the money," he noted, "but it may be that recent events — and especially the attention they have received — will alter budgetary priorities."

He might as well have said that integration is something that should be touched -- but not with feeling. Clearly, he had his Assembly bosses in mind when he wrote the memo.

OLD LETTERS just fade away in some files —yet to live another day.

One that came across our desk this week was from former County Supervisor Byron W. Leydecker to Supervisor Ernest N. Kettenhofen — in December of 1966. "I think it is still pertinent," said Leydecker this week when he sent a copy of the letter to the I-J.

"Marin County is fortunate to have someone of your caliber serving as a supervisor," Leydecker wrote Kettenhofen. "I have admired the fair and considerate manner with which you have listened to divergent viewpoints," wrote Leydecker, who then was retiring from the board.

He also praised Kettenhofen for being "completely informed about every issue in county government with which you have to deal," and for "inventiveness in finding ways to accomplish worthwhile projects and in finding solutions to complex, controversial problems.

"It's obvious that no one will run anything through the county as long as you are on the board," wrote Leydecker.

He apparently sent the I-J the letter to give Kettenhofen a bit of a pat on the back.

WHAT OUR READERS SAY

Comic Page 'Gets Worse And Uglier'

Editor, Independent-Journal:

Please, can't we have Mr. Tweedy back? The "comic" page gets worse—and uglier—with every change. There hasn't been a funny "Tumbleweeds" since it started. "Miss Peach" is almost as bad, and the drawing is terrible. "Little Orphan Annie" is eligible for an old-age pension, and her social ideas are fantastic. In fact, if my children were little I would feel called upon to deliver a lecture on law and order and "legal process" with almost every episode. She is almost as bad as Dick Tracy. There must be someone who can draw and be amusing somewhere. At least, let us have Mr. Tweedy again.

Modest Proposal By College Teacher

Editor, Independent-Journal:

I hope it will not be thought that what I shall propose is a hopelessly radical idea; these are changing times, calling for bold new solutions. At any rate, the following suggestions arise naturally out of suggestions made recently in the Independent-Journal, so that I trust they will be viewed as evolutionary, evolving as a natural outgrowth of community wishes.

My recommendation involves two groups at the College of Marin. Both groups have shown themselves to be increasingly dissident. This dissidence has taken a number forms in the first group, among which is a refusal to respect the good American business traditions (also observed in the Army, Navy and Air Force) of following the dictates of the chief administrator without question. These malcontents have gone so far as to offer advice on all sorts of college matters such as committee structure, campus planning, and administrative hierarchy, and have even asked to share in major decisions made on the campus.

In view of the above facts, and in view of the apparent fact that this group at the college is becoming superfluous, I recommend that the College of Marin forthwith dispense with the faculty of that institution.

It has come to my attention that another group at the college is equally dissident and superfluous. Indeed it has occasionally shown itself to be so imprudent as to support the above dissidents in their sniveling discontent, as if either of them could have the faintest inkling as to what education is wanted or needed, or how it may be brought about. Though in terms of mere numbers it is one of the largest groups on campus, in terms of eminence, prestige and seniority, it is clearly suspect. In addition, it is given to disruptive musical emanations, the occasional uttering of a profane or obscene word in public, and the making of amorous displays on the lawn. Its bathing habits appear to be distressingly irregular. In view of all this it seems unreasonable for it to wish to communicate with its superiors, but it does apparently not only wish, but expect to do so.

What is most shocking is that persons in this group seem to feel that the institution is there for the express purpose of serving him. In view of such impudence, it is clear that it does not deserve a continuing place at the college, and therefore I recommend that it, the student body, be dispensed with at the same time as the faculty, with which it has obviously conspired.

The immediate benefits of such moves will be obvious. The board of trustees and the administration will be freed to carry on their expansion programs without undue interference, to create new administrative posts, thereby creating new jobs, channeling idle tax money into the rental of new offices, the hiring of new clerical personnel, etc. It will be freed to carry on the real business of the college: public relations, fund-raising, real estate, architectural planning, the perfecting of administrative techniques. . . .

'Napalm Saves Lives'—But Whose?

Editor, Independent-Journal:

We learn that napalm, the jellied gasoline that sticks to your skin and incinerates you, is really a blessing in disguise.

"Dow Chief Says Napalm Saves Lives," reads a headline; American lives, of course. Vietnamese don't really count as 'people', apparently, because the Chief refers only to American servicemen.

What can we say for those in power who put our boys in a situation where their protection seems to require burning people up?

Discipline 'Typical Establishment'

Editor, Independent-Journal:

To deny a student access to his high school classes for three days, because of participation in a three-hour peace demonstration, is typically stuffy Establishment.

How much more would have been gained by an after-school detention, time devoted to writing a paper concerning the students' thoughts of peace. It would have clarified the thinking of the pupil and helped us to understand.

Had all of us hoping for peace stayed at home and written nice, safe, quiet, no-trouble letters to government, we would not even be within dreaming distance of peace discussions.

CONSCIENCE IMPLIES KNOWLEDGE

The word "conscience" merits thoughtful consideration.

It is derived from two Latin terms — "cum" (with) and "scientia" (knowledge).

The dictionary defines "conscience" as "a sense or consciousness of the moral goodness or blameworthiness of one's own conduct, intentions or character, a feeling of obligation to do right or be good."

To say that a person is a "man of conscience" indicates that he is motivated by inner convictions based on sound knowledge of the facts.

By living up to the dictates of your conscience you can honor God, respect others and enjoy the peace of mind, heart and soul that Benjamin Franklin alluded to when he said: "A good conscience is a continual Christmas."

Strive to increase your knowledge and develop your conscience. All your thoughts, words and deeds will then be a cause of consolation and joy rather than remorse or self-reproach.

"I always take pains to have a clear conscience toward God and toward men."
(Acts 24:16)

Strengthen me, Holy Spirit, so that I may always have the courage of my convictions.

What To Expect From Paris Talks: 'Fight While Negotiating' Is Key

WASHINGTON — To judge how the Paris talks are going, we need to keep in mind:

1. The best clues on the prospect of settlement will come first from the state of the fighting in Vietnam, not from the state of negotiation in Paris.

2. Hanoi's announced aim is to step up the war, pressing for battlefield gains to extract conference table concessions.

3. The Communists will be working to undermine the will to fight of both South Vietnam and the U. S. — so the talks will almost certainly be painful and protracted, as they were in Korea, with the possibility of stalemated recesses.

THESE JUDGMENTS do not come from guessing what Ho Chi Minh has in mind. They come from reading two of his detailed policy papers on his peace talk plans, prepared for political cadres in South Vietnam. They were found on captured enemy troops and are extremely illuminating about what to expect in Paris.

The reason why the news from the battlefronts in South Vietnam will tell more about the prospects for peace than what is being said in Paris is bluntly set out by Hanoi in this confidential memorandum for the VC:

"In fighting while negotiating, the side which fights more strongly will compel the adversary to accept its conditions. Considering the comparative balance of forces, the war proceeds through the following stages:

"The fighting stage.

"The stage of fighting while negotiating.

"Negotiations and signing of agreements."

HANOI ALSO stressed that the second stage of the war, now opening in Paris, will be marked by more fighting, not less. It put it this way:

"The future situation may lead to negotiations. Yet, even if there are negotiations, they are to be conducted simulaneously with fighting. While negotiating, we will continue fighting more vigorously."

This explains why, thus far at least, Hanoi will not say that it will not take advantage of an end to U. S. bombing or match U. S. de-escalation of the fighting with any de-escalation on its part.

This explains why North Vietnam timed its renewed offensive against Saigon to coincide with the opening of the Paris talks.

We can be sure that these Hanoi documents are a valid guide to Communist policy because they clearly state that the North Vietnamese politburo "has been unanimously entrusted with the task of carrying out" the three-stage strategy outlined above.

THEY ALSO SHED light on other questions arising from the Paris conversations. For example, why did North Vietnam reject talks when the U. S. ceased all bombing of the North for 37 days over the '65-'66 holidays, but agreed to talk on the basis of a limited cessation last month?

One answer in a Hanoi document captured a year ago is that the North Vietnamese were then counting on Red China for more aid or direct entry into the war.

"What we should do in the south today," Hanoi said, "is to try to restrain the enemy and make him bog down, waiting until China has built strong forces to launch an all-out offensive."

But waiting for China to do more has been fruitless; Peking has been helping less and less, not more and more. And today, while trying to persuade Hanoi not to negotiate under any circumstances, China has become so riven with internal strife that its ability to offer Hanoi much more than words is in serious doubt.

According to its own official statements, Hanoi considers the Paris talks the opening of a second front in the war, to continue while North Vietnam seeks to win enough on the battlefield to exact a peace settlement which will give it control of South Vietnam.

Not that they will succeed. But they will try "more vigorously" and the talks, as war tactics, will be prolonged.

Japan Loath To Assume Power Role In Orient

By LEON DANIEL

TOKYO (UPI)—George W. Ball, new U.S. ambassador to the United Nations, envisions Japan as a semi-superpower, but the Japanese show no particular enthusiasm for the role—especially if it involves assuming more military responsibility in Asia.

In his new book, "The Discipline of Power: Essentials of a Modern World Structure," Ball pictures a world in which the United States, the Soviet Union and Western Europe would be superpowers and Japan would be half a superpower.

Since World War II, however, Japan has shown no inclination to throw its weight around.

Although booming economically, the nation has moved very gingerly toward assuming a leading role in Asia. It is beginning to open its purse, very carefully, to underdeveloped nations, but it still protects its neutrality.

BALL PREDICTS there will be a growing effort on the part of the United States to persuade Japan to assume more military responsibility in the East, but he acknowledges that it may not be an "easy task."

Japan, the only nation to suffer atomic bombings, has what has been called a "nuclear allergy." A more descriptive phrase, and a stronger one, might be "nuclear neurosis."

The roots of pacifism in Japan, a nation whose constitution outlaws war, spring from the dberis of Hiroshima and Nagasaki. After 23 years, they grow deep.

So the Japanese are understandably sensitive on the subject of nuclear weapons.

A VISIT to Japan by a U.S. nuclear ship sends thousands into the streets to protest. Debates flare in parliament over such fringe issues as the stationing of U.S. B52 bombers on Okinawa.

Prime Minister Eisaku Sato sometimes demonstrates an unJapanese characteristic of saying exactly what he thinks. One of the things he says is that Japan's security is dependent on the U.S. nuclear deterrent.

When the nuclear-powered U.S. aircaft carrier Enterprise docked at Sasebo last November, Sato was besieged with protests from all sides. He replied cooly that the port call was allowable under the U.S.Japan security treaty.

That treaty comes up for renewal in 1970. Opposition parties on the left already have launched campaigns aimed at scrapping it. If they are successful, Japan could find itself standing in the rain without the protection of America's nuclear umbrella. This would be a precarious position for a nation entertaining any aspirations of becoming one half a superpower.

BALL PROPOSED that the United States continue to provide Japan with commercial opportunities and warns against protectionist legislation which discriminates against Japanese goods.

This is what the Japanese like to hear, rather than a lot of talk about how they should spend more money for defense.

When liberty is mentioned, we must always be careful to observe whether it is not really the assertion of private interests which is thereby designated. — Georg Wilhelm Friedrich Hegel

King's Dream Becoming Reality In Nation's Capital

WASHINGTON (AP) — By the last week of this month, an army of uncertain thousands will converge on the nation's capital in fulfillment of plans made by Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. before his assassination.

It is the Poor People's Campaign, now being led by Reb. Ralph D. Abernathy, successor to King as president of the Southern Christian Leadership Conference.

In originally announcing the plans for the huge march, Abernathy said: "We will launch the most militant, nonviolent and aggressive war ever waged by the civil rights movement in this country. We will lead waves of people in our campaign to Washington and we will stay there until Congress deals with racial poverty in the United States."

The first part of the campaign took place the week of April 29 when Abernathy and a committee of 100 presented demands to governmental leaders in what he called the "educational phase" of the campaign. Later, he said he had won sympathy in high places; but sympathy was not enough, the march would go on.

Abernathy said poor white people from Appalachia, Indians, Mexican-Americans and Puerto Ricans would join Negroes in the campaign.

The March itself began May 2 in Memphis, Tenn., from the spot where King was felled by an assassin's bullet April 4.

Led by a battered old wagon hauled by two mules, about 400 persons joined the symbolic 2 and one-half mile march through a slum area.

From there they went to Marks, 70 miles to the south in Mississippi's flat Delta, the first step of the march's main Southern leg to Washington.

It is this group, one of five planned to converge on the capital, that will do the actual construction in Washington of the "Resurrection City" a shanty town to house the marchers and dramatize the campaign.

If plans work — and the schedule and routes changed frequently along the way — this "permanent" group would swell to hundreds of thousands over the Memorial Day weekend.

The Midwestern campaign kicked off with a May 8 rally in Chicago and the Northeastern leg set off the same day with a small group at Brunswick, Maine. A Western caravan started from East Los Angeles and a rocky Mountain caravan left from Denver, Colo.

Transportation included mules, cars, buses and trains with the plan, as described by Rev. James Bevel, an SCLC staff member, for the marchers to be "involved in very militant nonviolent action" when then began to arrive in Washington Monday.

Memorial Day — May 30 — was set for what the timetable called the "all-out effort for the invasion of the war on poverty."

Object: "We want an end to poverty, we want meaningful jobs and we want a guaranteed annual income," Abernathy said.

Psychoanalysts Vs. The Public

BOSTON (SS) — Psychoanalysts in the past have not done much to counter the sneers and satire aimed at their profession. To them it's a cost of the kind of work they do.

They interpret jokes about the couch and Freud and criticism of the value of psychoanalysis and the scientific worth of analytic theories more or less as evidence of public fear. Ever since Freud, psychoanalysts have expected the public to react defensively against their probes of the unconscious.

STAKES HIGHER

But now the stakes are higher. The field of mental health is taking off in a big way. New community mental health centers promise to reach many thousands of people with a variety of non-analytic tools — drugs, new therapies and techniques aimed at changing behavior rather than solving internal conflicts.

A casualty of this head-long rush to action is likely to be interest in the unconscious psyche: just the subject on which analysts have spent years building a body of information and theory.

There is a danger that mental treatment will become too superficial, says Dr. Burness E. Moore, associate clinical professor at Yale University and a training analyst at the New York Psychoanalitic Institute. "The contribution of the psychoanalyst to theoretical ideas may be completely lost."

Faced with the threat of diminishing influence over mental health, the American Psychoanalytic Association has decided not to counterattack, but to educate the public and the public press in the ways of its science.

"In the past, we made no effort," says Dr. Moore. "Now we are trying to represent ourselves as accurately as possible."

DIFFICULT ROAD

It has not been easy. From an initial reluctance to even talk to reporters, psychoanalysts have moved to restrained and cautious communication with the professionals who report their work to the public.

Years of misinterpretation have built up a sense of wariness of the part of the analyst, explains Dr. Martin A. Berezin, Boston analyst on the Harvard faculty as well as the staffs of Beth-Isreal and McLean Hospitals.

"Experience with a good deal of resistance and hostility has led older analysts to exercise great caution in dealing with the outside world, adds Dr. Moore.

But also, psychoanalysts are not accustomed to defending their profession. Individually, analysts have exercised considerable hegemony over the field of mental health.

In Boston hospitals, for instance, by far the greatest number of training psychiatrists are in fact psychoanalysts. (The difference between the two is that an analyst spends seven to eight years after psychiatric training at a psychoanalytic institute studying unconscious processes.) Most heads of psychiatric departments in Boston are analysts.

The same is true in other cities with psychoanalytic institutes, says Dr. Berezin. Nearly all analysts hold positions outside their private practice — most of them teaching posts. But the fact is not widely known since an analyst will often identify himself simply as a psychiatrist.

SOCIAL ISSUES

Contrary to popular conception, analysts have also been busy with social issues, Dr. Berezin points out. Of five major task forces on the Joint Commission for Mental Health of Children, three are headed by analysts.

And at its annual meeting in Boston, the Psychoanalytic Association held sessions on such topics as hippies, sex education and youth unrest — and this time they were publicized.

Psychoanalysts as a group have not usually received any credit for this kind of work, Dr. Berezin says. "When we wear so many hats, we are never identified as analysts. Now we are pushing identification a little."

But while psychoanalysts are bending into an information effort, they show no inclination to modify the discipline to fit community psychiatry. "If an analyst," says Dr. Berezin, "loses that sense of intrapsychic behavior, he stops being a psychoanalyst. I can't analyze a marriage. My expertise is to help the individual understand his conflicts."

The association has, however, officially backed community psychiatry. "We want to make it very clear that the organization is concerned with this," says Dr. Moore. "We should perhaps have done it earlier.

It might have helped eliminate the concept of a psychoanalyst working only with one affluent patient and being unconcerned with the broader aspects of mental health."

Analysts, says Dr. Moore, will not decry other kinds of mental therapy so long as they do not lose sight of the individual in a bureaucratic approach to mental health.

This Week In The World

By UNITED PRESS INTERNATIONAL

Thirty-five worshipers at a Church of Christ prayer meeting in the north Arkansas community of Oil Trough huddled under the pews Wednesday when a tornado dropped out of a bank of thunderstorms and ripped through the town with a roar like that of screaming jet engines.

The roof of the church was carried away and the walls collapsed over the pews. When the funnel cloud had passed, thirty-four of the worshipers crawled from beneath the pews unhurt. The other, who was injured, was carried to a clinic on the church door.

Others in the community of 250 were not so fortunate. Six were killed, including a man and his wife who were blown from their home into nearby White River.

In one of the most destructive series of tornadoes in history, 67 funnel clouds stamped through communities and cities in Arkansas and 10 other states during the week, killing more than 70, injuring thousands and leaving millions of dollars in damage. Thousands were homeless.

Other states hit by the deadly funnel clouds were Iowa, Illinois, Indiana, Minnesota, Wisconsin, Nebraska, Missouri, Ohio, Tennessee and Mississippi. But the death toll was highest in Arkansas, where 44 died, 34 of them at Jonesboro, a university city of 25,000.

Around The World; Around The Clock:

TOYASAKI, Japan: The world's most powerful earthquake in four years left more than 40 persons dead, over 200 injured and 1,200 house in ruins on the northern end of Honshu, 300 miles north of Tokyo. Damage was put in the hundreds of millions of dollars.

SAIGON: The U.S. Command reported that 562 Americans were killed during the latest week for which it has tallied Vietnam casualty figures, bringing the toll of America dead in the war to 22,951. During the same week, allied forces reported killing 5,552 enemy soldiers.

PARIS: Delegations from the United States and North Vietnam opened talks on the Vietnam war with the same old charges and countercharges, accusing each other of "aggression" and "monstrous crimes" but U.S. officials continued to press for an agreement on scaling down the fighting.

PARIS: The French government mobilized thousands of troops in an attempt to stop the spread of what it called "anarchy" by dissident students and workers, who are holding several university buildings, city landmarks and factories. The workers joined the student revolt, which began in protest of what the students called archaic teaching methods.

WASHINGTON: Some 3,000 persons taking part in the Poor People's March converged on Washington and began construction of "Resurrection City, USA," where they say they will stay until Congress passes legislation to help the poor.

A Modern Sea Treasure Adventure

LA JOLLA (AP)—The world's most scientific drilling ship sails June 15 on an 18-month voyage across two oceans seeking long-buried treasures of vast potential to man's mind and purse.

The 400-foot Scripps Institution of Oceanography vessel will draw on craft orbiting in space for navigational guidance and warning of storms as it probes in record depths in the primordial ooze that covers seven-tenths of the planet.

PROJECT'S GOAL

Dr. Melvin N. A. Peterson, chief scientist for the National Science Foundation's Deep Sea Drilling Project, says the goals are both academic and practical.

The ship could find:

1. Clues to new oil fields believed bigger than any yet tapped from the continents and their fringes.

2. Precious metals—gold, silver and manganese—strewn in nodules, possibly layer upon layer for miles on either side of giant cracks in the earth's crust.

3. A history of earth, recorded in the sediments built up through the ages by the "snowfall" of plant and animal matter from the surface to the ocean floor.

Although the $12.5-million project is primaricly scientific, he says, it is frankly aimed also at proving the economic benefits to be gained from exploring the ocean and its floor.

Although the ship is rigged much like those that drill for oil in the comparatively shallow waters of continental shelves, officials are hoping fervently they will not actually find oil.

TAKING PRECAUTIONS

Striking oil—and the gases captive in underground pools—could release a gigantic bubble to rise up through the ocean and burst at the surface, tossing the 10,500-ton ship like a raft caught in a hurricane.

"Chances are the ship would capsize," says Peterson.

"We are taking every possible precaution against finding oil, even though locating possible oil-bearing areas is one of our major goals. If our core drill bites into anything that looks like oil sands we'll pull out and move off in a hurry."

The Scripps project calls for drilling 40 to 60 holes as deep as 2,500 feet in depths as great as 20,000 feet in the Atlantic and Pacific. Aboard the ship will be 75 scientists, engineers and crewmen—including expert geologists and drillers.

Peterson believes rich deposits of minerals may lie on the slopes of the great rises—much like mountain ranges—jutting up from the floors of the Atlantic and Pacific oceans.

One of the goals of the project is to take samples of the sediment on the slopes.

FROM TEXAS

The ship that will make this possible is the Glomar Challenger, due to sail June 15 from Orange, Tex., on its maiden voyage. The latest thing in drilling ships, it has a 142-foot-tall derrick over a 20x22-foot center well through which as much as 23,000 feet of five-inch pipe can be lowered to core into the ocean floor.

Peterson says this will be the longest drill string ever suspended from a ship or floating platform.

Cores from the rotary-drilled holes will be pulled up continuously through the drill pipe.

These cores will be the real prizes of the expedition. From the layers of sediment scientists hope to be able to reconstruct the history of the planet by dating the fossil remains of plants and animals which have died and fallen to the ocean bottom.

When evidence of oil or mineral wealth are found, the locations will be marked and the information released to industry.

The ship's first drilling test will come about July 1, when it will start coring into some mysterious humps dead center in the Gulf of Mexico. The humps, 10,000 feet below the surface of the ocean, are known to oceanographers as the Sigsbee Knolls and are believed to be salt domes formed by the pressure of sediment slowly sliding down the slopes of the Gulf basin.

Later the ship will move out into the Atlantic and on to the Pacific to test a spectacular new concept that the ocean floors are expanding outward from the great undersea rises and spreading the continents apart at a rate of an inch or so a year.

The theory is that all the continents once were a single land mass and split up and began to drift apart some 200 million years ago. It is based on the way the opposite coastlines of the Atlantic Ocean seem to match, like the opposite shores of a river. The fact that the opposite coastlines of the Pacific do not match is sometimes explained as being due to an ancient land collapse in the middle of that much wider ocean.

Astronauts Like Apollo Decision

SPACE CENTER, Houston (UPI)—Spaceman Michael Collins, a member of the third Apollo crew, says America's astronauts are pleased with the space agency's decision to put men aboard the next Apollo flight.

"I think it's a good decision," Collins said in a recent interview.

Obviously, he said, the most recent unmanned Apollo flight—the second space test of the Saturn 5 moon rocket—did not go as well as the initial Saturn 5 flight last November. But he said the things that went wrong on the second flight "were well known and correctable."

After the second Saturn 5's flight was analyzed Maj. Gen. Samuel Phillips, Apollo program chief, recommended to space agency head James E. Webb that the program switch directly to manned flights without another unmanned test. Webb accepted this recommendation.

Phillips said the engine and vibration problems which marred the flight of rocket number 502 could be corrected in ground tests. Only if these tests failed, he recommended, should there be another unmanned mission.

There were reports of unhappiness at the Manned Spacecraft Center over this decision. These unconfirmed reports said space center officials wanted the third Saturn 5—rocket number 503—to fly unmanned.

Collins denied these reports of unhappiness were true so far, at least, as the astronaut corps was concerned.

"I know of no push from this (the astronaut) office to go unmanned on 503," he said. "I personally think it was quite the opposite—we were pushing to go manned."

Collins said he was pleased with the way preparations for the next three Apollo flights, the only ones to which crews are now assigned, have been going.

Production of the cone-shaped Apollo command module at North American Rockwell Corp.'s plant in Downey, Calif. is going smoothly, he said, and the spacecraft looks good.

First on the flight schedule is a 10-day mission by astronaut Walter Schirra's three-man crew in September, launched by a Saturn 1 rocket. Then at the end of the year a crew commanded by spaceman James McDivitt is to fly the entire moon machine, launched by the larger Saturn 5.

Collins' own mission, commanded by astronaut Frank Borman, is set for early next year. It, too, will blast into space on a Saturn 5 and will fly 4,000 miles away from earth—a distance no past spacemen have reached.

Gallant Breton Clan Maps French Attack

DUBLIN (UPI)—A long hot summer for President Charles de Gaulle is being plotted by a handful of commando-style Breton rebels in a peaceful Irish seaside town near here.

Above a small house at Bray in County Wicklow flies the black and white flag of Brittany, a symbol for some 30 Bretons who have pledged their lives to win independence from the French.

THEIR LEADER

Their leader is M. Yan Renard-Goulet, a 50-year-old sculptor and one-time French army commando who proudly takes responsibility for many recents act of violence against French institutions in Brittany.

"Bombs and bullets are all the French understand," says Renard-Goulet, who claims to have seen the inside of every jail in his homeland.

"We intend to step up our campaign of violence against the French this summer," he added, "and we have informed De Gaulle of this decision."

Some weeks ago the Bretons, members of the National Council for a Free Brittany, forwarded a formal communique to De Gaulle warning him they planned new attacks in the immediate future.

"A few days after we sent the communique, there was another little explosion," said Renard-Goulet. "Just a way of signing it."

Renard-Goulet claims the three million Bretons still living on the European mainland have never given up their claim to nationhood and to self-government.

LINKED TO IRELAND

The history of the Breton nation, once recognized as a distinct Celtic people, bears a strong resemblance to the turbulent history of Ireland, the mother of all Celtic nations.

Its origin goes back to the 5th Century when the Bretons emigrated from Britain and settled in the west of the European mainland. Brittany maintained her independence for more than a thousand years until in 1532 she was militarily defeated by France and forced to accept union.

But her political autonomy was guaranteed by treaty and was preserved for the following 250 years until in 1789 the treaty was annulled and the Briton nation was fully incorporated into the French way of life.

Although the Breton tongue is prohibited in Brittany's schools, Breton nationalists claim more than one million people speak it on the mainland.

"The French state has used its control of Brittany's economy to break up the cohesion of the Breton people and enforce the emigration of its most active elements," Renard-Goulet said.

REPRESSION CLAIMED

"It has used its control of education and administration to stifle the cultural development of a Celtic people and to try to eradicate the language," he added.

Under sentence of death by the French, Renard-Goulet, a small, bearded, soft-spoken man doesn't appear unduly worried.

"I get abck there from time to time to visit my men in the field," he said.

Now an Irish citizen, he speaks with fervent enthusiasm about his adopted country—"If it weren't for the 1916 Irish rebellion no small nation could have faith in winning against a powerful country."

Married, with two children, Renard-Goulet lives above a quiet studio which belies the fiery plans being fomented inside its walls. He claims his movement has many supporters in the United States and in Canada.

Strawberry Center Provision Of Will

By HARRY CRAFT

A provision in a dead man's will led to the creation of one of Marin County's most successful and attractive shopping centers.

Strawberry Town and Country Village, south of Alto, now has 68 stores and small shops.

They deal in women's wear, children's wear, men's wear, shoes, food, drugs, novelties, gifts, imported goods, antiques, television and stereo sets, cameras, jewelry, books and music. There are also four restaurants, decorators' studios, beauty salons, bakery and barber shop.

ABOUT 85 per cent of the occupants are original tenants and have done well in business. They have come from San Francisco, the East Bay, other parts of the state and from Southern Marin — moving their main stores here or opening up new ones or establishing new branches.

A number have expanded their quarters since they first opened, picking up additional space from the few merchants who have moved away.

At the time of this writing there were no vacant stores available.

Cleverly decorated store windows attract shoppers and passersby. They face on broad, shaded walkways under wide overhanging roofs that are supported by huge, rustic timbers.

MANY OF the shops are small, but everywhere there is the feeling of spaciousness. Most of them observe Sunday hours, making the center especially suitable for joint husband and wife shopping excursions. There are parking spaces for almost 300 cars.

Only a few years ago all this was bare land, grass and rocks — and a set of blueprints that did portray a shopping and commercial area, but nothing exactly like today's extensive development.

In December, 1961, Samuel R. Neider, a Marin and East Bay land investor living in Tiburon, died of a heart ailment and left an estate then estimated in excess of $1 million.

HOW MUCH it actually valued out in excess of this figure was not made generally known until over a year later when an offer of more than $2.9 million was tendered for most of Neider's Strawberry Peninsula properties. It was approved by the probate court and the land was sold to Milland Development Co., San Francisco.

It comprised 260 acres and included the areas known as Harbor Cove, Harbor Point, Harbor Island and land near the east side and end of the peninsula originally slated for a luxury tower apartment development. But this was bitterly opposed by nearby Strawberry residents and failed to materialize.

SAMUEL R. NEIDER

THE SALE did not include a level strip of 17 acres, commercially zoned and lying along the east side of Highway 101, south of the Alto interchange to Tiburon. Neider had planned this as a shopping center and had stipulated in his will that it be held in trust for such a development.

He had gone so far as to have plans drawn for what he called the "Harbor Point Shopping Center" and had taken a lease from Safeway Stores for a centrally located market which would be the focal point of the retail activities. Safeway and Neider talked of building a rather ornate structure with an aluminum geodesic dome which would serve as a prototype for other smaller buildings in the center.

At that time many local businessmen expressed doubt that a commercial shopping decelopment at this location would be successful.

NEIDER'S death interrupted the project and for the following 15 months it failed to get beyond the initial planning stage. But with the rest of the Strawberry lands sold in the spring of 1962, sufficient funds were raised in probate, enabling the 17 acres to be distributed by preliminary decree to the testamentary trust created under Neider's will.

The three trustees, Pacific National Bank, William McIntosh and Robert M. Underhill, could then have petitioned the court to set aside the will provision if they had chosen to do so. That after deliberation they decided to let Neider's wishes stand showed later that they had used good judgment.

larger Northgate Shopping Center of the Draper Companies was already getting under way and attracting the interest of many large retailers who contemplated moving to Marin. The Neider estate trustees had to determine if this would affect the chances of a shopping development in Strawberry.

If not, was the location otherwise suitable? Was it large enough? Who would finance it? Who would construct, lease and manage it?

Conferences were held with real estate brokers, planners, investors and shopping center owners. All agreed the Strawberry location was good, but to be sure the trustees employed Real Estate Research Corp. for two months of field research on traffic patterns,incomes and shopping habits in the surrounding communities, projected population growths and possible competitive developments.

WITH ANOTHER, more authoritative confirmation of location suitability resulting from the survey, the trustees set out first to settle on an architectural design that would enhance the existing landscape, and second, to find a builder.

Tours were made of centers in and around San Francisco. Many offers were received to lease and manage the Strawberry project once it was built but they did not solve the problem. Fortunately the trustees were able to find a design, a builder and a manager all at the same ime.

Investigations had led them to the Town and Country Village shopping center adjacent to the Stanford University campus in Palo Alto, built by a contractor, Ronald Williams, in 1951.

CONSTRUCTED of old railroad timbers, the buildings were designed in the California mission style with red tile roofs and ivied pillars. Williams, considered one of the most successful developers of town and country village style centers in Northern California, had also built another 50-acre development of the same kind in San Jose.

He had never built such a center for anyone else. But he agreed to build one for the Neider trustees and agreements were worked out for the construction and also the later management of the project. Interim financing was arranged through Bank of California and long term loans were committed by Connecticut General Life Insurance Co.

THE LEASE with Safeway was renegotiated. First plans for the store were thrown out and new ones were made in keeping with the general architecture of the proposed development. When built, it resulted in a beautiful 24,500-square foot market, and provided an "anchor tenant" for the smaller stores which were to cluster on both sides and in back of it.

Plans call for the center eventually to be expanded toward the south. So far, only seven buildings have been constructed on 10 acres. This leaves another seven acres to be developed sometime in the future.

With all present retail space now occupied and more in demand, the time may be soon.

Local Firm Licks Vinyl Repair Problem

Feldron Masters Dyeing

Is your vinyl upholstery scarred with cigarette burns, ripped or faded into drabness?

There is now a way to overcome these problems thanks to one of San Rafael's newest firms, Feldron Industries of 144 Paul Drive, Northgate Industrial Park.

For years the repairing and dyeing of vinyl upholstery had been virtually impossible and researchers were long baffled.

THEN Feldron Industries discovered and developed a method for repairing and dyeing that has sparked a whole new service-business field.

The process is currently being used by franchised distributors in exclusive territories, who have reported on the effectiveness of the system.

Badly ripped booth-cusions and bar stools have been repaired and refinished, regardless of the extent or the cause of the damage.

COLOR-FADED upholstery, damaged or not, has been resurfaced and dyed to its original color or a different shade, the firm reported.

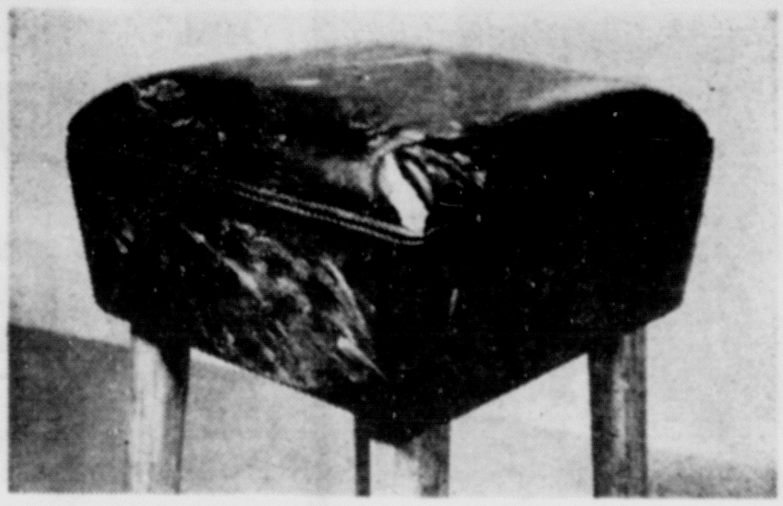
"Low-cost maintenance of vinyl upholstery is only half the story," said Lee Ceccotti, president of Feldron Industries. "Our method offers a new concept and economy in changing decor. It is a true vinyl dye system making it possible to match or change colors, at a fraction of the cost of recovering."

Recognized as a major breakthrough in vinyl and synthetic technology, the process is being applied in a wide range of industries including airlines, bus companies, hotels, barber shops, theaters, taxicab fleets, bars, clubs and restaurants.

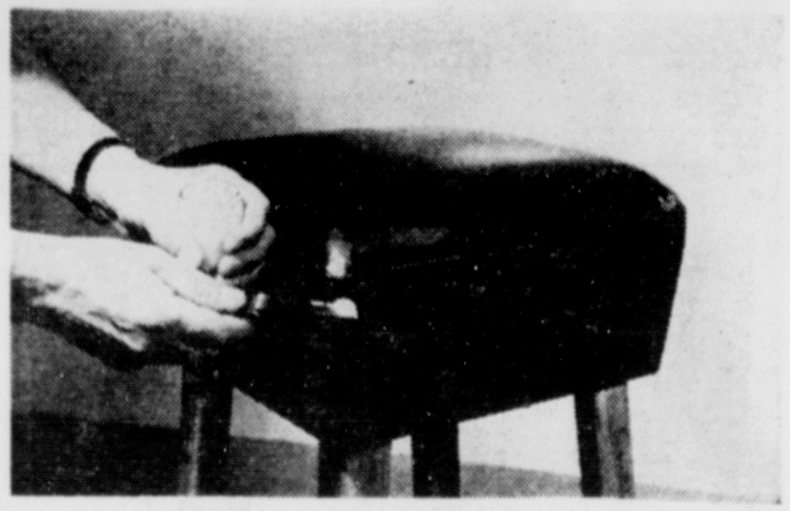
LOOKING to the future the company plans to produce the dye in aerosol cans for sale through retail stores, so that the housewife can do it herself.

Used in the process are "Vinylclean," a cleaner and "Vinylprep," and agent to prepare plastic materials for dyeing. Any large cuts or tears are filled in with backing material.

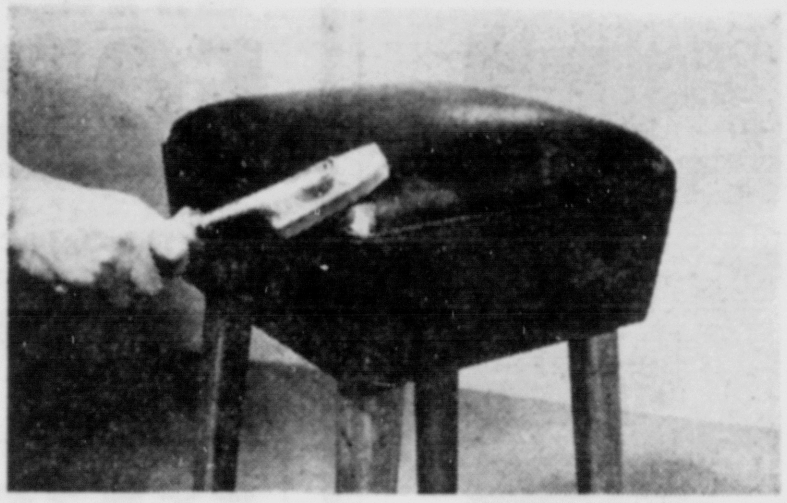
The new firm started operations last September and has five employees. It is headed by five Marin residents, Lee Ceccotti of Larkspur, president; Donald Hanne of Sleepy Hollow, vice president in charge of sales; Frank Williams of Santa Venetia, vice president in charge of marketing analysis and distribution; Ronald Antonioli of San Rafael, vice president in charge of manufacturing, and E. T. Ghirado of San Rafael, secretary-treasurer.



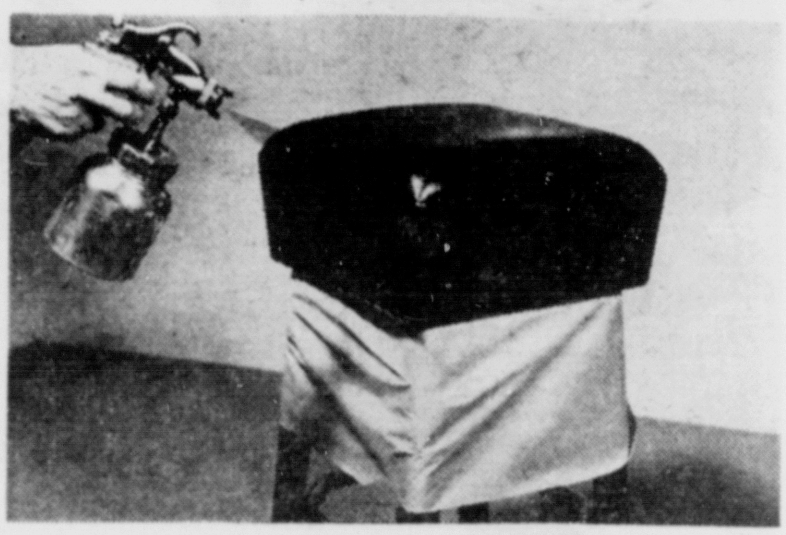
THE FIRST STEP with a damaged cushion, such as that above, is to treat it with a cleaner and an agent to prepare plastic materials for dyeing.



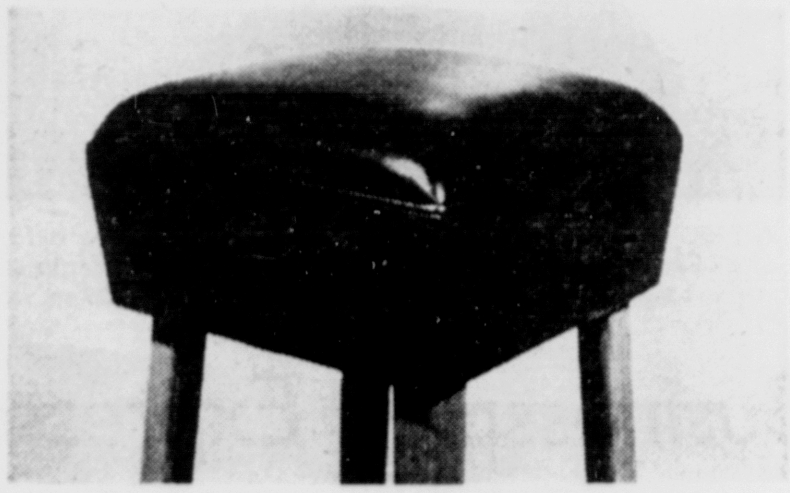
COLOR-MATCHING and troweling is the next step with pigment added to the repair substance.



TEXTURING, bonding and resurfacing of the renewed area are achieved in one smooth, simultaneous operation.



IN REFINISHING the entire area, now resurfaced, is dyed by spraying.



AFTER REPAIR, the bar-stool looks as good as new with color and texture uniformly matched.

Car Show To Aid Drake High Scholarships

Sir Francis Drake High School's Scholarship Foundation, in the parlance of children's books, might well be described as "the little foundation that grew and grew."

Scholarships are awarded in memory of a former student, the school's first dean of girls, a language teacher and this year for the first time, Dr. Martin Luther King Jr.

The foundation was started in 1964 after the death of a student, Daniel Joseph Vacha, a month after he was graduated, said Drake counselor Mike Convis, the foundation's president.

HIS PARENTS, Mr. and Mrs. Edward Vacha of San Anselmo offered to establish a scholarship in his name. Convis, who had long nurtured the idea, suggested that the money be the first contribution to a permanent scholarship foundation.

The foundation was organized and incorporated that year, and in 1965 the first Daniel Vacha scholarship was awarded.

Then in 1966, the Muriel McCrum scholarship, which had been in existence was added to the foundation's program. Mrs. McCrum, former dean of girls, had "sold candy bars for years for scholarship funds, but the money was just sitting there and being depleted," said Convis. "It would have been gone in two years."

THE FOUNDATION'S program is to invest the funds, and its aim is to increase them to the point where the interest will permit scholarships to be granted perpetually.

"Right now our tentative goal is $25,000 and we have a little more than $9,000 in the bank," Convis noted.

The foundation awards four scholarships of $250 each and there are about 20 applicants each year, he said. "Any senior can apply and scholarships "are awarded on the basis of need, record and potential."

The foundation's third scholarship is in memory of Miles McColm, a language teacher. "The goal is to add as many scholarships as the endowment will allow, with the aim of helping all worthy graduates who need financial assistance to attend college."

This year the foundation added the Marin Luther King Jr. scholarship after the assassination of the civil rights leader.

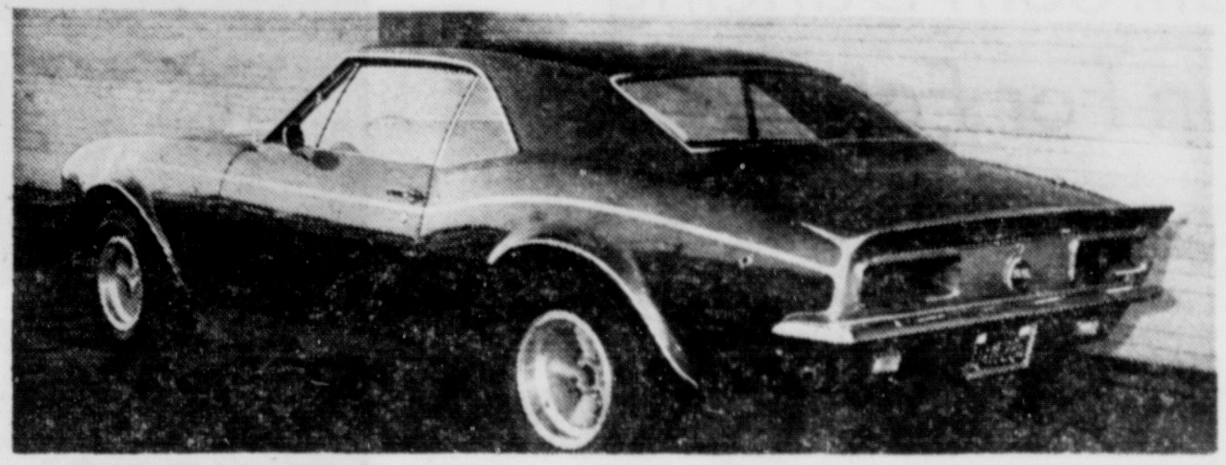
The foundation is administered by a 13-member board, consisting mainly of community residents with students and teachers assisting in fund raising events.

One of the major fund raising events is the foundation's annual Car and Boat Show which will be held May 26 at Sunny Hills grounds, San Anselmo, from 11 a.m. to 4:30 p.m.

This year the show will have more than 80 entries ranging from a 12-foot-long motorcycle called the "Psycho" to a Rolls Royce Silver Cloud I, a $15,000 classic.

Among other attractions will be a 1967 Camaro with $12,000 worth of modifications and a 1914 Model T flatbed truck.

"Students sell tickets, teachers handle concessions and the Quick Changers of Marin, a car club, are doing all the technical work about cars," Convis said. "One thing about this nobody gets one penny."



THE CAMARO, at right, owned by Peter Hoyt Berg of Tiburon, has modifications valued at $12,000, will be entered in the Car and Boat Show at Sunny Hills in San Anselmo May 26 to benefit the Sir Francis Drake High School Scholarship Foundation.

Ballroom Dancing Fun For Family

Despite the current popularity of the swim, jerk, monkey and other assorted dance fads, standard ballroom dancing is not dead.

That the opinion of Mrs. Bari Frohlich of Corte Madera, director of the Junior Cotillion of Marin.

She feels that the fad dances where individuals move independently, interpreting the music as they move, have "lost all sense of masculinity."

THERE IS no masculine lead for the partner to follow, Mrs. Frohlich explained. "To me this is rather an alarming thing. The masculine image is lost in so many ways and now in dancing."

These dances, where youths gyrate to the beat of a rock band, are popular because dancers don't have to have any training, she said. There is a basic movement, but not much form or discipline . . . "they just interpret the music."

There are many youths who can "really dance" but in the past few years, fewer of them "are interested in being subjected to the discipline of the standard ballroom dance," she said. "Ballroom dancing usually requires some training."

FOR YOUTHS hung up on the fad dances, she advises them that "the time will come when they will go to a nice hotel and there won't be rock music, and if they don't know ballroom dances, they will just sit all night."

Mrs. Frohlich also is an advocate of families dancing together. "We are trying to have activity that includes young people and parents," she said. "Ballroom dancing is one of the few activities where an entire family can participate."

She believes that there is "far greater understanding between children and parents if they can do something as recreation together."

ON TEACHING students, Mrs. Frohlich commented: "What I think is the most important part of training is to stress that they can have a good time and still act like ladies and gentlemen."

For those who may have wondered what has happened to ballroom dancing, the Junior Cotillion of Marin will present its annual Family Gala Trophy Ball at San Rafael High School gymnasium from 7:30 to 11 p.m. today as a benefit for the Marin Aid to Retarded Children.

STEREO HI-FI

By C. J. Catania
Audio Engineer

OUTDOOR MUSIC. Yes it's patio time again here in Marin. You can enhance your summer fun days with outside speakers. An outside speaker or speakers can be connected to your home Hi-Fi or Stereo music system, or to the earphone jack of a small portable radio or tape recorder.

Any speaker system that has a conventional impedance around 8 ohms may be used outside; however, the elements may play havoc with those that are not designed for the outdoors. The veneers on wood furniture type cabinets may peel apart with the weather. The wind and the rain may destroy the cone of the loudspeaker. Even the moisture in the evening air may cause damage.

Outdoor speakers are designed to be waterproof, and some even to be waterproof for use submerged in swimming pools. The outdoor speaker elements have cones, usually a paper type material, that have been treated so that moisture will not effect them. They have specially made front grills to allow sound to pass through but to deflect water. Some outdoor speakers are made up as projectors, a form of trumpet, and these types are generally made of plastic exteriors that protect the speaker elements mounted well within the horn.

You will find that you may need more power out of doors. There are no reflective surfaces as there are in a room and the sound just keeps on traveling out. You may not find as much warmth to the music because of this, but actually, live musicians also sound this way when playing out of doors without any reflective surfaces. There will be some loss of the dimensional effect normally heard from stereo speaker systems because of the lack of reflective surfaces to provide some reverberation. Despite these differences, music in the patio while sitting or barbecue-in or at the pool while swimming or sunbathing will add the touch of perfection to make your day a happy one.

To power outdoor speakers, it takes one pair of wires connected, preferably through a switch, to the speaker terminals of the home music system for each channel. That is, one pair will be required for a single monaural speaker, and two pairs will be required if the outdoor system is to be in stereo with two speakers. These cables should terminate into jacks at the outdoor speaker location or locations. Visit our stereo store and let us show you how.

Mountain Play And Marion

Natural Theater Site Spotted By Hikers

Marin County's Mountain Play is, at one time, one of the area's most outstanding traditions, an event that has gained world recognition and, for the thousands who attend the exciting outdoor pageant each year, a famed Northern California "landmark."

This year's production, "Alice Through The Looking Glass," et Sundays May 19 and 26, will mark the 51st performance on Mount Tamalpais.

Of the hundreds who give much of their time preparing and planning throughout the year, Marion Cain, president of the Mountain Play Association, perhaps best illustrates what goes into the making of a nationally honored pageant.

LONG associated with all theater in Marin, Marion, a long time San Anselmo resident, has had every type job with the Mountain Play from actress to Board of Director member.

Her theater interest has long been working with children. Starting in 1937 with the Magic Circle, Marion has worked with thousands of Marin youngsters through the years. She also helped found the Ross Theater in 1937 and has given countless lectures and talks to various groups on theater.

But her two current projects are the famed Mountain Play and the Magic Circle, the group she started for children and which became a full time task five years ago. Her productions with the Magic Circle, which she directs and produces, and which stars children, have been seen, this year alone, by more than 10,000 children. (The lead role in the recent critically acclaimed "Jack and the Beanstalk," incidentally, was played by Alice Jacobs, a youngster who will be seen as Humpty Dumpty in this year's Mountain Play."

MANY of the Magic Circle plays are originals, written by Mrion, who is presently working on "The Merry Pranks of Igll Eulenspiegel," a 14th Century Robin Hood type, which will be presented May 25 at the Northgate Stage of the Marin Art and Garden Center.

Her love for children and theater is reflected in her own family. Her son, Ron Hayes, is a top ranking Hollywood actor who already has several TV series to his credit including the recent "The Rounders"; Tim is a member of the Sons of Champlin, one of the area's better bands and Bob Cain, recently home from the service, is interested in art and photography.

ALL OF these talents, as Marion recently explained, "are ways that I hope will allow me to further educate youngsters. I have hopes of using these projects to help children, even by television and in schools during school time, to give them added enjoyment and understanding of social studies and literature."

But still, it is the lure and the thrill of the pageant presented each year high atop Mount Tamalpais that finds Marion working throughout the year.

It all started in 1913 when three hikers, John Catlin, R. F. "Dad" O'Rourke and Garnet Holme noted the obvious natural amphitheater. Holm was then director of dramatics at the University of California and began thinking of an appropriate production.

In those years, the only way to reach the theater was by hiking and word of the undertaking quickly spread to various hiking clubs. When "Abraham and Isaac" was presented, over 600 hardy hikers were on hand.

"IN 1915 Congressman William Kent of Marin deeded the site to the Mountain Play Association," Marion explained, "with the understanding that a play be given each year."

Annually the Mountain comes alive with colorful characters and this year, with all of Alice's friends — such as Humpty Dumpty, Tweedledee and Tweedledum, the Red Knight — this year's production should prove most colorful.

"Special sound equipment will be used," Marion added, "and Tom Chestnut, long associated with Marin schools, has written a special sound musical score to go with each character."

College Marine Study On Land And Sea

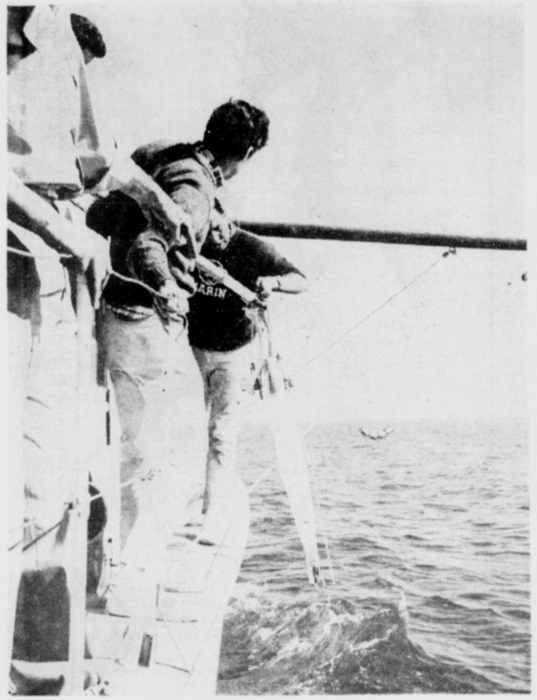
DAWN COMES UP over Angel Island as College of Marin students in Marine Science are silhouetted along the Sausalito waterfront near Seal Rock while investigating marine life. Marine investigations are conducted the year around by class groups and individuals working on research projects. (Photos by Roger Bockrath)



GROUP FISH STUDIES in the waters off Marin are part of the college's program which consists of marine biology, oceanology and marine technology. The stations at Bolinas has two Boston whalers and a 32-foot diesel boat for shallow and deep water studies.

By EARLENE JONES

When College of Marin turstees voted to establish a marine laboratory at Bolinas in 1964, in buildings made available by the Coast Guard on a show use basis, the science faculty assured the trustees they would hope to follow the wise old saying, "huge doors swing on small hinges."

Developments to date indicate that this was indeed only the beginning of a much broader marine science program for College of Marin and a program that would serve as a model for other schools, and possibly become a functional teaching station where elementary, high school, and college-university curricula could be coordinated, as well.

Today, Gordon Chan, marine biology instructor at College of Marin, with a board — approved hiatus from teaching responsibilities, is travelling throughout the state visiting other schools and industries developing state and national quidelines for a junior college technical education program in the marine science field.

HIS TIME and expenses are being paid by the State Department's Bureau of Junior College Vocational and Technical Education.

Chan was the State's Department of Junior College Vocational/Technical Education choice to write up the state guideline because of his extensive survey and study of marine technicians in California.

"Our marine science program is doing an excellent job of providing the first two years of study for the baccalaureate student, Chan said; however, the gap that exists is in the two-year terminal field with study that will lead directly into employment as a technician in the marine industry.

THIS IS not only of concern at College of Marin, but statewide, as evidence by the work I'm now doing. We are the pioneers, so to speak, in marine science education in Northern California junior colleges." "The feeling of enhancement and grandeur in the exploitation of the seas surrounds us, but we must be realistic in looking at job opportunities facing our immediate students," Chan told a group of educators recently.

Job opportunities are beginning to open rather rapidly in the industry. Researching the industry last summer, he learned specifically what the technician needs were in the industry. In September he published the results of these efforts, "A Survey of Marine Technicians in California," which is the only study ever made in the U.S. on this industry.

HIS FINDINGS revealed that there were close to 500 California firms and organizations now hiring marine technicians at an average salary of $7,550 per year. With only one college in Washington, one in Oregon, two in Southern California and three in the east offering vocational education in this field, Chan sought to accelerate plans to include the two-year terminal program in College of Marin's curriculum. It is listed in the 1968-69 catalog, and he anticipates an enrollment of 20 to 30 students for the fall semester.

The students who enroll will take the existing courses such as oceanology, biology, natural history and marine organisms. The first semester will give him an idea of whether he likes the vocation, and will also give him a broad background in the sciences.

After two years, or four semesters of study, the student will graduate with a certificate in marine technology and earn an Associate degree as well.

"PREVIOUSLY, everyone has thought of a marine technician as a person who works on boats," Chan said. "In the survey of marine technicians, we found only a few organizations that hired individuals to actually work on boats as an oceanographic technician. The biggest demand is with corporations such as General Dynamics and Lockheed Ocean Research in Sunnyvale. All these large corporations have marine programs and are building submersibles, research vessels, and exploring usages of the seas.

"These individuals would be defined as marine technicians, yet they, infact, might be landlocked, and never even see the ocean in the course of their work. I am making an effort to broaden the classification of a marine technician and include the ocean-going technician as a division of marine technology."

"OUR PROGRAM at College of Marin will stress and train the individual in electronics and instrumentation. In a competitive situation, our student might be an applicant for a job that required knowledge in both electronics and marine laboratory work and would be better equipped to handle the job."

Chan sees the College of Marin program expanding to serve other junior colleges in Northern California, and especially other Bay Area junior colleges.

Another facet being explored is in the field of teacher training. The University of California is investigating the possibilities of the Bolinas laboratory as a training center for science educaton teachers. "Teachers wanting to upgrade their education in marine sciences may, in the future, obtain university graduate credit," Chan said.

"ELEMENTARY and high schools have been involved in a visitation program over the past few years, but it's on a "come and look" basis. We have not coordinated our efforts in offering them an opportunity to "come, study and learn." We hope to be able to begin work on this study next year." Chan has approval from the instructional committee to continue his hiatus from teaching next fall, but the board approval has not yet been received.

Chan was a biology instructor at Drake high school from 1955 through 1936 before joining the faculty at College of Marin. Working with Chan is science department chairman Alfonzo Molina, who has been an instructor at College of Marin since 1930.

CLASSROOM AND LABORATORY study is conducted at the college's Marine Station at Bolinas, a two-story station with a marine library, research rooms and offices, sleeping quarters and kitchen for overnight field trips as well as the laboratory.

FIELD STUDIES are an adventure, whether using nets for group fish studies, as shown above, or traipsing through shale reefs at Duxbury Reef, near the Marine Station, below, for other forms of marine life.

College Marine Study On Land And Sea

UP FISH STUDIES in the waters off Marin are part of the college's pro- n which consists of marine biology, oceanology and marine technology. stations at Bolinas has two Boston whalers and a 32-foot diesel boat for low and deep water studies.

re, whether us- dies, as shown above, or traipsing through shale reefs at Duxbury Reef, near the Marine Station, below, for other forms of marine life.

By EARLENE JONES

When College of Marin turstees voted to establish a marine laboratory at Bolinas in 1964, in buildings made available by the Coast Guard on a show use basis, the science faculty assured the trustees they would hope to follow the wise old saying, "huge doors swing on small hinges."

Developments to date indicate that this was indeed only the beginning of a much broader marine science program for College of Marin and a program that would serve as a model for other schools, and possibly become a functional teaching station where elementary, high school, and college-university curricula could be coordinated, as well.

Today, Gordon Chan, marine biology instructor at College of Marin, with a board — approved hiatus from teaching responsibilities, is travelling throughout the state visiting other schools and industries developing state and national quidelines for a junior college technical education program in the marine science field.

HIS TIME and expenses are being paid by the State Department's Bureau of Junior College Vocational and Technical Education.

Chan was the State's Department of Junior College Vocational/Technical Education choice to write up the state guideline because of his extensive survey and study of marine technicians in California.

"Our marine science program is doing an excellent job of providing the first two years of study for the baccalaureate student, Chan said; however, the gap that exists is in the two-year terminal field with study that will lead directly into employment as a technician in the marine industry.

THIS IS not only of concern at College of Marin, but statewide, as evidence by the work I'm now doing. We are the pioneers, so to speak, in marine science education in Northern California junior colleges." "The feeling of enhancement and grandeur in the exploitation of the seas surrounds us, but we must be realistic in looking at job opportunities facing our immediate students," Chan told a group of educators recently.

Job opportunities are beginning to open rather rapidly in the industry. Researching the industry last summer, he learned specifically what the technician needs were in the industry. In September he published the results of these efforts, "A Survey of Marine Technicians in California," which is the only study ever made in the U.S. on this industry.

HIS FINDINGS revealed that there were close to 500 California firms and organizations now hiring marine technicians at an average salary of $7,550 per year. With only one college in Washington, one in Oregon, two in Southern California and three in the east offering vocational education in this field, Chan sought to accelerate plans to include the two-year terminal program in College of Marin's curriculum. It is listed in the 1968-69 catalog, and he anticipates an enrollment of 20 to 30 students for the fall semester.

The students who enroll will take the existing courses such as oceanology, biology, natural history and marine organisms. The first semester will give him an idea of whether he likes the vocation, and will also give him a broad background in the sciences.

After two years, or four semesters of study, the student will graduate with a certificate in marine technology and earn an Associate degree as well.

"PREVIOUSLY, everyone has thought of a marine technician as a person who works on boats," Chan said. "In the survey of marine technicians, we found only a few organizations that hired individuals to actually work on boats as an oceanographic technician. The biggest demand is with corporations such as General Dynamics and Lockheed Ocean Research in Sunnyvale. All these large corporations have marine programs and are building submersibles, research vessels, and exploring usages of the seas.

"These individuals would be defined as marine technicians, yet they, infact, might be landlocked, and never even see the ocean in the course of their work. I am making an effort to broaden the classification of a marine technician and include the ocean-going technician as a division of marine technology."

"OUR PROGRAM at College of Marin will stress and train the individual in electronics and instrumentation. In a competitive situation, our student might be an applicant for a job that required knowledge in both electronics and marine laboratory work and would be better equipped to handle the job."

Chan sees the College of Marin program expanding to serve other junior colleges in Northern California, and especially other Bay Area junior colleges.

Another facet being explored is in the field of teacher training. The University of California is investigating the possibilities of the Bolinas laboratory as a training center for science educaton teachers. "Teachers wanting to upgrade their education in marine sciences may, in the future, obtain university graduate credit," Chan said.

"ELEMENTARY and high schools have been involved in a visitation program over the past few years, but it's on a "come and look" basis. We have not coordinated our efforts in offering them an opportunity to "come, study and learn." We hope to be able to begin work on this study next year." Chan has approval from the instructional committee to continue his hiatus from teaching next fall, but the board approval has not yet been received.

Chan was a biology instructor at Drake high school from 1955 through 1936 before joining the faculty at College of Marin. Working with Chan is science department chairman Alfonzo Molina, who has been an instructor at College of Marin since 1950.

GORDON CHAN, biology instructor at the Marine Station, notes that working on a submersible or research vessel that explores usages of the seas is one job possibility for students after two-year training program.

Scathing Report On 'Justice,' Judges And American Courts

By BRYCE W. ANDERSON

CRISIS IN THE COURTS by Howard James, David McKay Co., 260 pages, $5.50.

CALIFORNIA'S PRODIGAL SONS by Spencer C. Olin Jr., University of California Press, 182 pages, $6.95.

Those who entertain the sanguine belief that American courts dispense justice with uniform diligence, conscientiousness and impartiality are due for a rude shock if then read "Crisis in the Courts" by Howard James.

This book is the outgrowth of a series of articles James did for the Christian Science Monitor, whose Midwestern bureau he heads. He visited courts from coast to coast, sat and listened as "justice" was purveyed.

He wound up with an estimate that half the men who sit on the benches of the nation's myriad courts (nobody even knows the exact number) are incompetent to judge. Some knowledgeable critics, he says, consider his estimate too low.

But it is not merely incompetent judges that hamper our courts. James found all sorts of other shortcomings in courts ranging all the way from the assembly-line operations of some big city traffic and police courts to the shirtsleeve informality of part-time justices of the peace in the back country.

One of the greatest flaws in our judicial system, he declares, is that many lawyers "believe the law and the courts are the private domain of their profession, not the possession of the people of America" — and worse, most of the people have come to accept this idea.

The nation's highest court has itself been sharply critical of the operation of lower courts in some of its noted decisions. (For instance, it was much more critical of the court than of the press in the Sam Sheppard murder conviction reversal, although the lawyers and judges don't mention that.)

Almost everyone who works with the courts is highly critical of them, James found, but very few people — in fact very few lawyers—ever watch the courts in operation.

Some judges, and many law school professors, are making heroic efforts at court reform. But these efforts meet a logjam of indifference on the part of legislators and most of the legal profession — and of course, of most of the courts.

Commenting on the "wide gap between what we say is true about justice in the United States and what is really true," James cites case after case where those embroiled with the law in both criminal and civil matters receive little resembling fair play.

The whole adversary concept of criminal law in the United States makes the trial a sort of game, he writes — and court decisions are reversed or upheld on appeal, not because they are wrong or right, but because the judge did or did not violate some rule that probably has nothing to do with justice.

Courts, James found, put up with inefficiencies that no business would countenance. Judges are elected, appointed, and assigned with no relation to their actual legal training.

And the law will not reform itself, he warns. If there is to be much-needed reform, it must be pushed by the people — who really own the courts, although they do not realize it.

For James finds it is still true, as Alexis de Tocqueville wrote well over a century ago, that:

"Some of the tastes and habits of the aristocracy . . . may be discovered in the character of lawyers. They participate in the same instinctive love of order and formalities; and they entertain the same repugnance to the actions of the multitude, and the same secret contempt of the government of the people."

"California's Prodigal Sons" is sub-titled "Hiram Johnson and the Progressives, 1911-1917," and that tells what it is about.

Spencer C. Olin Jr., who is assistant professor of history at University of California at Irvine, has done considerable research into his subject, which he proves by copious notes and references (fortunately in the back of the book).

However, his material is neither very well organized nor very well balanced. He opens, of course, with the statement that the Southern Pacific controlled California politics until Hiram Johnson led the revolt of the Progressives (Bull Moose variety). He is content to pretty much let it go at that.

Lacking in any documentation of how the railroad controlled the state's politics, or of what harm it did other than to give preferential freight rates to certain oil comapnies and produce shippers. He is content to accept the railroad as a bugaboo and let it go at that.

At the other extreme, he devotes 51 pages — nearly a third of the book—to Johnson's split from Charles Evans Hughes, the Republican presidential candidate in 1916. He recites the history of the famous "snub" at length, but more than that, he precedes it with two chapters of endless discussion of whether Johnson at various points during the campaign was supporting the national ticket and if so, how much.

His recounting of the legislative accomplishments of Johnson and the Progressives during the years they controlled the California Legislature is sketchy, but he devotes much space to private letters exchanged among them — particularly to letters from Chester Rowell, the Fresno Republican editor who was a leader in the "revolt against the railroad."

All in all, "California's Prodigal Sons" has the look of having been produced to satisfy the academic demand to "publish or perish."

WITH HEART TRANSPLANTS occurring with increasing frequency, Ballantine has seen fit to bring out a paperback reprint of "The Open Heart" by Nicolai Amosoff, noted Russian heart surgeon (75 cents). Amosoff tells his story of two open heart surgery cases, one a failure and one a success, which sums up the feelings of a physician who holds a human life in his hands.

FOR GIRLS who believe that surefire recipes are the quickest way to a man's heart, Fawcett has published a witty cookbook "Saucepans and the Single Girl" by Jinx Kragen and Judy Perry as a paperback (60 cents). The authors, who attended Stanford University and once lived in San Francisco, slant their recipes with one eye on getting their man and another on their limited budget.

Sea Horses

THIS IS ONE of the illustrations by Ingrid Niccoll from "The Sea Brings Forth" by Jack Rudloe, Knopf, $6.95. Rudloe, a marine biologist, presents a colorful account of his life collecting and shipping exotic sea creatures for scientific use.

Sleuths & Suspense

THE GREAT SPY RACE by Adam Diment, E. P. Dutton, $4.50, 191 pages. Reviewed by Donald G. Davis.

Philip McAlpine who works in London for 6 (NC/NAC) lays off the marijuana a bit more in this story than he did in Diment's first book "The Dolly, Dolly Spy." It doesn't make that much difference because he's always turned on.

McAlpine's dash for prize money is directed by an ex-spy who owns and runs a never-never land in the Indian Ocean. All spies gather there to be teased from point to point in Europe by clues that are clear, probably to McAlpine and author Diment. They're after secret film.

The whole thing is swinging, dashing, unbelievable and a bit of fun if you can wade through enough four-letter words and English slang to make it appear to be worthwhile.

THE GOSSIP TRUTH by Jonathan Burke, Doubleday and Co., 192 pages, $3.95. Reviewed by Rachel Farrara.

This is an unusual story that keeps the reader wondering.

A young gossip columnist faced with writing about the same places and uninteresting copy, daydreams about a sparkling newcomer to enliven the dull social events she must attend. She gives him a name, wit and charm and sparks her column with his personality.

When she realizes her mistake it is too late, and when an equally charming man appears and claims to be the man she has invented, the fat is truly in the fire and the plot thickens — as the saying goes.

By this time you are well hooked and must continue to unravel all the yarn. The book is well written, the characters real and the conclusion most satisfying.

Oklahoma Violence

THE GREY HORSE LEGACY by John Hunt. Alfred A. Knopf, 427 pages, $6.95. Reviewed by Gary Tischler.

Hunt, an Oklahoma transplant now living in Paris and the author of one previous novel ("Generations of Men," written in 1956) has tried to come to grips with a theme that in some ways is peculiarly native American: myth vs. reality, tradition and legend vs. the solid present.

On one plane, "Legacy" is a haunting mystery without a solution, told in a doom-ridden, poetic style that is sometimes difficult to cut through.

Andrews Thayer, a man surrounded by New England artifacts of mission-ridden whaling captain ancestors comes to Grey Horse, Oklahoma with his wife and young son, to solve a mysterious series of killings. The victims are oil-rich, befuddled Indians, all dying violently. The center of the web spins around Carter and his Indian-ballerina wife Rita and a score of spillovers from the just receding Wild West in the 1920s. Thayer is a haunted man in search of a mission, a New England St. George burning to set things right in the traditonal way.

The mission ends in tragedy, as violence strikes again and the legacy is left to Amory, Thayer's son, who, years later in Paris, tries to come to terms with his own life. Strangely enough, he writes pulp novels of the old West, creating myths and legends far removed from reality. And over the years, he has built his own history into a kind of a dream-story far removed from what happened.

Hunt's sense of atmosphere and detail is haunting, recreating an Oklahoma in which Indian wars and land races are still a vivid memory, in which violence, random and fated, is a real, every-day kind of thing.

Thayer, Amory, and all the characters of "Legacy," are haunted by a real legend of violence and murder, the kind of ghosts that blow over bones and make adventures and romance out of slaughter and doom. And, if it is not reading too much into Hunt's book, these are the ghosts that seem to haunt contemporary Americans, who, with no free frontiers to conquer, are still haunted by the violence of their country's birth. Like Amory writing his pulp western, we have tended to submerge the bloody ghosts into matinee movies and television serials.

There are some minor objections to the novel. Hunt has a tendency to let his characters be they drunken wrecks of cowboys or Eastern crusader, philosophize verbally, giving false drama to some utterances. And he seems to have lost the talk of the regions. His attempts at homespun dialogue are unrealistic and clash with the overall poetry of the book.

MARIN SLIGHTED

Author Gives Report About 'Real Society'

THE RIGHT PEOPLE by Stephen Birmingham; Little, Brown and Company, 341 pages, $10. Reviewed by Anne G. Stine.

Stephen Birmingham's "Our Crowd" — a best seller for many months — was a study of the Jewish elite in New York. His new book, "The Right People," deals with society throughout America.

In his opening statement, Mr. Birmingham says, "Real Society is a part of Society — the upper part . . . Real Society is composed of older people. It is composed of older families. Older families are better people. Better people are nicer people . . . Cream rises to the top."

This book is wide in scope and ranges over the whole of the United States. It covers such residential areas as Westchester, the Main Line, Grosse Point and Washington, D.C.

It describes how the monied people live and play, their vacation grounds: The spas on different shores, in the mountains and deserts. In this connection, Mr. Birmingham, points out that grandness is not necessary to Society, whereas the opposite is true for many of the non-Society who live in parts of Florida and Palm Springs.

Descriptions and details of prominent boys schools and colleges — their histories and current places in Society — are informative and well written but it is interesting to note that no girls schools or colleges are dealt with except briefly, and there is practically no mention of western education. This would seem a serious omission.

San Francisco Society is given considerable coverage. Marin County is pretty much dismissed with the comment-supposedly made by a Burlingame woman, "People do still move out to Marin, but I don't know what happens to them. They sort of disappear and we never see them again."

This is a long book. The pictures are excellent. There are many direct quotes from those in Society, but all too often one reads, "As a woman says . . ." and one cannot help but wonder, who was the woman?

There is humor throughout and much that is really fascinating especially in the histories of such organizations as the Junior League and various men's and women's clubs.

Birmingham has obviously done his research thoroughly and writes with authority and a perceptive eye. To the average reader however, the main interest will be in descriptions of places about which he has heard, or where he has lived and with which he is familiar.

Ancient Roman Personalities From Psychological Viewpoint

AUGUSTUS AND NERO, by Gilbert Charles-Picard, 190 pp., Apollo Editions (Paperback), $1.75. Reviewed by Gary Tischler.

The use of modern psychological techniques to gain new insights into historical figures is probably not as new as the publishers of this book claim, but it can still point the way to some novel or overlooked aspects such as this book does in its portrait of the architect of Pax Romana and one of its chief reactionaries.

Picard points out that Augustus, more than any Roman figure, was responsible for the institution of the emperor as a god, not in any religious sense, but as a civic, national god. He made the emperor stand for Rome as a national entity of peace, and solid tradition, a surface throwback to all the old virtues of the Republic's morality and honor.

In setting that kind of an example, Augustus went against his own nature and killed any normal family or personal ties he may have had. His children revolted against the static moral tone of his rule, the false piety and austerity that belied Augustus' own peculiar sexual tastes.

If Augustus was the architect of Rome's glory under the emperors, Nero, the much-maligned butt of historians, may have been one of its few originals.

Always thought to be insane (he was), effeminate and sadistically cruel with artistic pretensions, he is presented as much more than that.

His love affair with the arts was more than a matter of pretensions. He was the only emperor who considered himself an artist above all else. In the end, he sacrificed his crown to art.

Picard presents an emperor who murdered out of fear, who instigated an artistic and moral reaction to the traditional arts and mores of Augustan and Republican Rome. In the end, Neroism was ahead of its time and so was Nero.

Drama Of Life In Ghetto

THE RIGHT TRUMPET by John Roberts, McGraw Hill, $4.95, 176 pages. Reviewed by Laurel Shapiro.

If you blow the right trumpet, the walls come tumbling down," believes the young hero of this first novel. In his case it happens, and with plenty of drama.

A freak accident has caused him to press for a real meaning in life. His search leads him to a childhood playmate, now in the ghetto, who dismisses him as the enemy. But he persists, and eventually becomes accepted by the black motorcycle group his friend leads.

Incomprehensible as it is to his sympathetic girl friend and, unfortunately, the reader) he moves to the ghetto and devotes his whole life to relating to, and inevitably fighting alongside, his new black friends.

Although this action, and others, are unconvincing, the pace holds up. But a serious credibility gap develops around the character of the Negro chum, whose dramatic change from hood to civil rights leader appears wholly unlikely. For that matter, one wishes the character of the hero were not so sketchy; one gets the uncomfortable feeling that he did not exist at all before his trip to the ghetto.

The many passages of technical shoptalk should please motorcycle buffs.

Kingsley Amis, No Fleming, Puts Bond Back In Action

COLONEL SUN, a James Bond adventure, by Robert Markham (Kingsley Amis). Harper & Row, 244 pages, $5.95. Reviewed by Jeff Greer.

Nearly a decade ago, Kingsley Amis ruffled the feathers of science fiction fans with a book called "New Maps of Hell," which rattled harsh words for the literary efforts of many science fiction writers.

"Colonel Sun" is my first chance to see how Kingsley practices what he preaches about fiction.

Kingsley has revived the James Bond character created by Ian Fleming; this time the enemy is a Yellow Peril type, Col. Sun Liang-Tan. Sun plans to make Bond and his bosses the patsy for a Peking plot against the Kremlin and assorted Mediterranean nations.

There are the usual spy types, women, shooting scrapes, and the like. What gadgetry there is, is all World War Two vintage. The plot is standard.

Kingsley Amis is no Ian Fleming, although Bond fans may long for more Bond novels. I'll give Amis the benefit of the doubt and blame his failure to live up to the literary standards he set for science fiction writers eight years ago, on his living within the confines of a borrowed hero and a continued story line created by another author.

Had Amis not stuck out his neck with "New Maps of Hell," I'd have considered "Colonel Sun," merely a good, average spy yarn— with a spectacular dust jacket.

The Ticker Tape

50 WALL STREET by Vartanig G. Vartan; McGraw-Hill, 341 pages, $5.95. Reviewed by James E. Williams.

This is the type of novel that will probably wind up as a movie script. It's a new look at Wall Street by a New York Times reporter who covers the nation's leading financial center.

Kimbridge & Co. is a distinguished old brokerage house. When senior partner of the firm suggests the creation of a new partnership and incorporation, the novel comes to life. Three young men are in the fighting for the new board seat. Theirs is a ruthless fight for power.

It's a very tightly written first novel, resounding with the calls of the traders and the pulse of the ticker tape.

With this Vartan has woven a surprising ending — one that lifts the novel above the ordinary plot.

Glacier Park A Land For All Seasons

Lofty Glacier Park, astride the Rocky Mountains on the Montana-Canadian border, is a land for all seasons.

Its towering mountains and quiet valleys beckon Americans to a high view in the Switzerland of America.

For summer visitors, Glacier is 1,000,000 acres of alpine vistas and pure mountain air, with accommodations to match. Spacious hotels, built on a scale to complement Glacier's grandeur, offers continental service and fine food.

THE TRAVELER doesn't need a car to see Glacier. Glacier Park, Inc., provides bus service from East and West Glacier entrances, and tours within the park. This summer for the first time buses will run seven days a week between Kalispell and Glacier and Yellowstone parks via Great Falls, serving flights into Kalispell, Great Falls and West Yellowstone, Mont.

This year, also for the first time, the Great Northern's Empire Builder will also stop at East Glacier, supplementing regular stops made at the park entrances by other Great Northern trains.

ONCE THERE, visitors can see the park from open-topped sky view buses; hike over any of the 1,000 miles of trails; cover it on horseback, or just enjoy it quietly from a hotel veranda.

Tours allow time to stop over at any point for an overnight pack trip, an afternoon hike, horseback ride, or a morning of golf. Sleeping-in is not frowned upon. For evening entertainment the hotels offer dancing, dining, cocktails and musical and variety shows staged by the student personnel. Park naturalists present illustrated lectures nightly on the unique history and geology of Glacier.

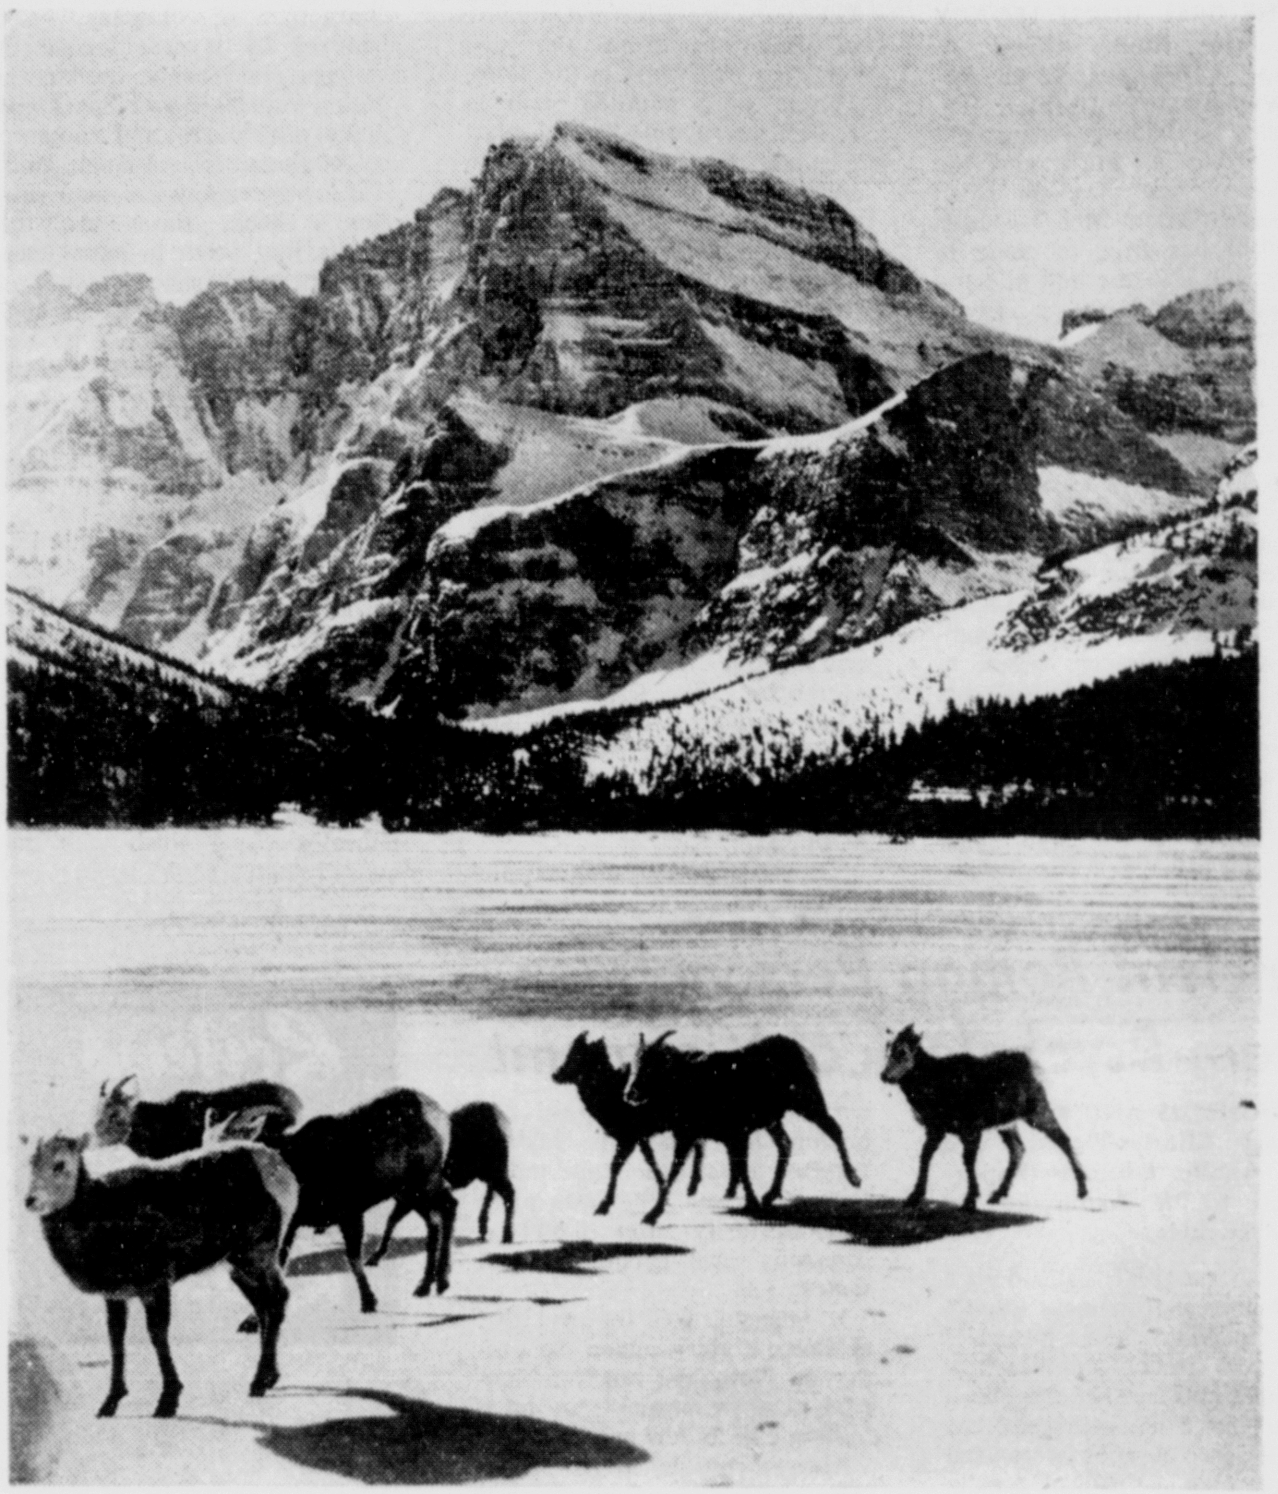
A traveler with a car and only one day can tage the 60-mile Going To The Sun Highway (elevation 6,664 feet) through the spectacular center of the park, with plenty of time to capture magnificent views of glaciers, cliffs and snowclad mountains on film.

MOST VISITORS find the inescapable mountains fascinating, but so much nature can prove too rich a tonic. For those who wish to take it in smaller spoonfuls, alternating with civilization, the hotels and lodges offer havens where humanity can reassert itself.

Most hotel facilities, tours and other activities are open June 15 through September 9. Some are open slightly earlier or later for pre-season and post-season visitors who prefer to see the first gentle greens and blossoms of spring, or the brilliant fall colors.

ROADS are open as soon as they can be cleared, usually mid-May, and remain open until snow makes them impassable in October. This year a February thaw opened the road to May Glacier early, and also opened a new challenge to park visitors. Snowmobiles, for the first time, dared the heart of Glacier in winter. This growing form of winter recreation may result in a longer season, or perhaps year-round enjoyment of the park. Accommodations are always available in the towns surrounding the park borders.

All information on tours or reservations is available from Glacier Park, Inc., 149 No. Stone Ave., Tucson, Ariz. 85701, September 15-May! 15, or company headquarters at East Glacier, May 15-September 15.



ROCKY MOUNTAIN Big Horn Sheep were photographed when snowmobiles traveled the road to Many Glacier at Glacier National Park, East Glacier, Mont. There were 77 in this herd, including 14 lambs, previously seen in their natural winter habitat only by park rangers and naturalists before snowmobile use was permitted in some areas by the National Park Service.

FOG TIPS

Even though we are fast approaching the summer months, heavy fog may frequently blanket California's coast and many of her island areas, constituting a serious driving hazard for those motorists who are unaware of the safety techniques used when driving under these conditions, reports the National Automobile Club.

According to NAC, motorists should practice these rules for their own safety and the safety of others when driving through foggy areas:

1. Switch headlights to low beams and concentrate on the right hand edge of the road ahead. Headlights on high beam only make vision worse.
2. Drive at a moderate speed and increase following distance, but if possible, avoid an accident by maintaining a speed consistent with traffic flow.

The association also advised that drivers should remember to turn lights off when leaving the fog-covered area.

Auto Sightseeing Tops Fishing In Forest Parks

General sightseeing, as viewed through the window of a car, proved to be the most popular recreational activity on the National Forests in California in 1967, according to Forest Service Regional Forester J. W. Deinema.

More than 37 million visitors found enjoyment and relaxation in this manner. "This figure clearly reveals the large numbers of people who are now enjoying the aesthetic values found in our National Forests," Deinema remarked.

THE NEXT popular recreational activity was fishing. More than 11 million visits were recorded in 1967. This was followed by hunting with 4,800,000 visits.

The six most popular recreational activities in the National Forests in California during 1967 are listed below in order of their popularity: Auto sightseeing, 37,200,000; fishing, 11,200,000; hunting, 4,800,000; hiking, 3,900,000; camping 2,400,000 and skiing, 2,400,000.

Regional Forester Deinema pointed out the immensity of the recreational impact in California. "The National Forests in California account for 29% of the total recreational use on all National Forest lands throughout the Nation," he said. "More people are using the National Forests for recreational purposes and this increase is in evidence during all four seasons of the year. We anticipate that this trend will continue to accelerate."

There are 17 National Forests within the State of California, covering 19,400,000 acres. The National Forests are administered by the Forest Service, an agency of the U.S. Department of Agriculture.

TRAVEL NOTES

The United States Travel Service recently awarded Air France a distinguisher service citation for promoting tourism to the United States. In 1967, nearly 130,000 French residents visited the United States, an increase of more than 100 per cent over the 63,000 in 1966.

Oregon Caves Weird

Ages before man was created, nature's sculptors were hard at work carving out grotesquely beautiful formations deep within a marble mountain in what is today southern Oregon.

Final handiwork of these elemental forces was the Oregon Caves, a weird underground realm in the Siskiyou Mountains, 50 miles south of Grants Pass and a few miles east of U.S. 199. (The Redwood Highway.)

MAINTAINED as a National Monument, the caves have become one of the major tourist attractions of the vast Redwood Empire of southwest Oregon and northwest California.

Flowing sinuously through caverns widening into chambers is the aptly named River Styx, an icy underground stream born somewhere in the depths of the earth and vanishing again into the darkness.

Electric illumination brings the eerie glow of dusk to this subterranean world of stalactites and stalagmites — formations at times bearing fleeting likeness to human figures.

PROBABLY no portions of the caves hold more fascination for tourists than the famed Ghost Chamber, or Dante's Inferno, the King's Palace, Paradise Lost, or the Wigwam.

Joaquin Miller's Chapel, still another beautiful chamber, was named for the California poet.

Miller called attention of the world to the caves in 1907, by referring to them as the "Marble Halls of Oregon."

Genesis of the "Marble Halls" was countless eons ago, when the area was submerged in a great ocean. A thick deposit of lime was left, which in time turned to limestone. Through succeeding epochs of heat and pressure the limestone became marble and, during the same period, the caves themselves were created.

DISCOVERY of the caves was quite by accident. The year was 1874 when a prospector named Elijah Davidson, in pursuit of a wounded bear, followed the animal into what appeared to be a tunnel in the side of a mountain. What he saw that day has since been broadcast to the world.

For additional information about regional attractions, write Redwood Empire Association, 476 Post St., San Francisco 94102.

Singapore Bustling With Housing Boom

The Travel Pages

SINGAPORE (UPI) — Stand atop Mount Faber and you can see the Singapore that was, the bustling Singapore that is, and the Singapore that will be.

To the southeast lies the long porkback island of Blakang Mati where General Archibald Percival found his shore guns pointing the wrong way (to seaward) in 1942, leading to the surrender of Singapore to the Japanese. The British have just returned the fortified island to the Republic of Singapore.

TO THE west and to the north Singapore's amazing housing developments poke their silhouettes into the sky.

And in the immediate foreground to the north lies a small "kampong" or village which almost certainly will make way for yet another housing development.

Probably no city in the free world can come close to matching Singapore's public housing program where a new apartment unit is opened every 45 minutes.

TODAY, half a million people — 25 per cent of Singapore's 2 million population — live in the 90,000 pleasant apartment units which have been completed. By the end of the housing and development board's second five-year plan, almost one-third of the population—630,000—will live in 126,000 apartment units.

These public housing units are not built as future slums. They all are situated in park-like areas where there are playgrounds and all the facilities of a small city.

What's more, they are built under a program of what might be called "capitalistic socialism" and they make money even though some apartments rent for as low as $10 a month.

The housing program developed by tough-minded Lim Kim San, then housing minister and now defense minister, stands out as a bright spot in an admittedly uneasy future for this one-time straits colony founded by Sir Stamford Raffles 149 years ago.

THE BRITISH will end more than a century and a half of rule and protection of Singapore in late 1971, laying the government of prime minister Lee Kuan Yew open to new and serious problems in the field of economics, security and defense.

A Little Bit Of Everything In Rome

By MADELINE DANE ROSS

When in Rome on a pleasant Sunday morning, take a taxi and go to see the flea market — Porta Portese.

It is a busy place because the Romans go there too. Sprawled above the Tiber embankment for at least a mile, it opens at dawn and bubbles along at a fast pace until about 1 p.m.

ON A large tract of land, much of it sloping, most of it on uneven ground, seemingly everything may be found for sale from satin brassieres strung up from stalls and blowing with the wind, to glass eyes, false teeth, transistor radios and valuable antiques.

"Don't leave Rome without visiting the really old section of the city, Trastevere," Trans World Airlines.

LIKE TOPSY, Porta Portese "just growed" after World War II, notably since 1955. As one looks about at the vast backdrop of new buildings, old buildings, stone walls and open spaces, one may question its permanence; but right now it is very much alive.

Alive with adroit young men who furtively sell black-market cigarettes or tempt folk to play the shell game.

Alive with families dressed for Sunday, who come for supplies both personal and household. It's all here — clothes and furniture, new and old; goldfish, canaries, rabbits, dogs, automobile parts, bicycles, motorcycles, guns and phonographs.

SEEKING ANTIQUES at bargain prices? Get up early and scan some of the paths where itinerant peddlers show their small collections right on the ground. Since they have no regular pitch, they may have just acquired the things they are offering. One year I found a lovely plump angel playing a lute. He was carved of wood, complete with wormholes. I won him for a song of lire — about $2.50.

On The Stereo Scene

By JOHN SUNIER

THE ROMANTIC FLUTE — CHOPIN: Variations on a Theme by Rossini; SCHUMANN: Three Romances; SCHUBERT: Introduction and Variations on a theme from "Die Schone Mullerin" — Jean-Pierre Rampal, flute / Robert Veyron-Lacroiz, piano — Everest 3165:

Three composers usually associated with piano music, in seldom-heard and gorgeous music for the flute. All are simply enchanting. Veyron-Lacroix, usually heard on harpsichord, switches to the percussion instrument in this recording originally made in France.

ROSSINI: Petite Messe Solennelle — Scotto / Kraus / Cossotto/Vinco/Polyphonic Chorus of Milan/Guilio Bertola — Everest CETRA S-44½.

This is not the smaller in length of Rossini's two masses now on disc, but since it eschews orchestral backing in favor of two pianos and one reeed organ, it is certainly "petite" in instrumentation. Once the listener gets over the almost humorous sound of the wheezy harmonium or reed organ, this sacret work takes on a deep beauty and lustre.

It is serious and yet there are many of the operatic touches found in the composer's earlier "Requiem." Stereophonics and record surfaces are excellent. This is genuine stereo, not re-channeled, as most of the Cetra opera series.

HOMAGE TO STRAVINSKY — Renard, 3 Pieces for String Quartet, 3 Pieces for Clarinet, Concertino for 12 Instruments; Symphonies for Wind Instruments — Domaine Musical Ensemble/Pierre Boulez — Everest 3184:

"Renard" is a stage work bearing much affinity to "Les Noces." It is sung in French here, although a version in English conducted by the composer is available. The "Concertino" is a transcription of music originally written for string quartet. Several wind instruments have been added.

The Symphonies for Wind Instruments is a tribute to Debussy and one of this writer's personal Stravinsky favorites. Boulez's performances are always polished and yet capture the mood of the music perfectly.

For it is writ in the hard agony
Of any man who mourns to see
His children always hungry.

Who can speak a eulogy
For one whose daily oratory
Spoke the tones of brave serenity
In face of death?
His requiem?
The lovesong of converted bigotry.

His monument?
Days and endless days of peace
Built from blocks of marbled black-and-white justice and paid for with spilled red blood.

Hedges Come In Many Styles

If gardeners who think of hedges think only of privet, there's probably good reason. After all, don't most of our hedges belong to this vigorous family? And for that matter can you think of anything that looks more like a hedge?

But if privet were the only plant material suitable for hedges, hedges would become very dreary, indeed. We'd be driven to building fences and walls just to break the monotony.

FORTUNATELY, there are any number of good hedging materials available, and your neighborhood California Association of Nurserymen member will be happy to point them out. First, however, you should take pause and determine just what you need from a hedge.

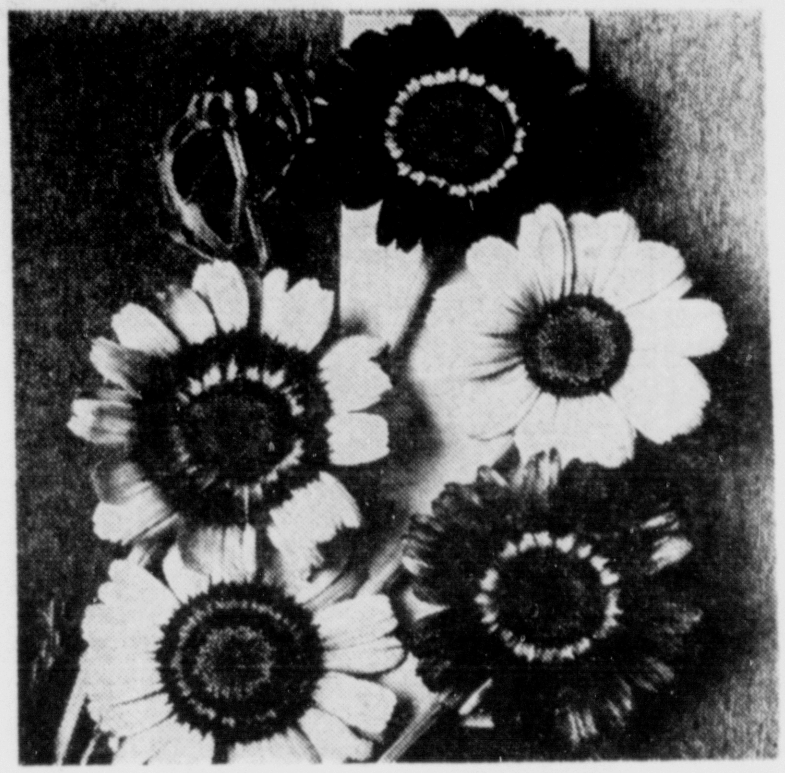
For instance, do you want to mark a property line and if so, how? A boundary between two drives must be formal and clipped of necessity; but a rear boundary can be informal and full.

Or, perhaps, you merely want to hint at a boundary in which case a neat row of Dwarf Boxwood or floribunda roses would draw the line very well.

HEDGES also serve to screen out unwanted views and to insure privacy. They act as a buffer against sound or as a shield against the wind. They define different areas of the garden such as a service yard or play area. On occasion, they even provide a foundation planting for the house.

Now we are ready to admit that privet will do many of these things well, but we can also point to several plants that do just as well. Take a long look at the pittosporum family — some of which can be clipped to strict formality, if that's your wish.

Old-fashioned glossy abelia can be just as formal as boxwood and twice as colorful. Junipers, especially the pfitzer juniper, can be delightfully informal. Dwarf myrtle, bush germander, viburnum, laurel, some of the barberries — they all are worth a look. After looking, you can still plant privet if you really want to.



BEAUTIFULLY ZONED or ringed with one or more colors are annual chrysanthemums which bloom in summer and fall like these from the Merry Mixture of doubles.

Sensitive Plant Responsive

Garden Page

The most delicate touch of a fingertip on a single leaflet of a sensitive plant is sufficient to cause that leaflet to fold up in response.

Run the tip of a finger down and all of them collapse, face the stem, no matter how gently, and it will instantly bend downward.

THE PERSON who named the sensitive plant Mimosa pudica in botanical Latin must have had a sense of humor for Mimosa comes from the Greek word "mimos," an actor, while pudica means modest. A modest actor it is indeed — retreating at a touch.

This physiological response of the true leaves to touch makes the sensitive plant one of the most remarkable in the plant kingdom.

IT HAS been a source of wonder to successive generations of children who like nothing better than to watch the plant react to their manipulations. Oddly, the first two leaves to appear (the seed leaves) do not respond to touch.

Of course these startling movements do the plant no harm. It recovers within minutes (faster if it is growing in full sun), but it may be several hours before it performs again.

SENSITIVE plant, a native of the sub-tropics, may be grown from seeds for use as a house plant or in the garden. Its only needs are a sunny spot and constant moisture in the soil.

The fine, lacy leaves are pretty, the ball-shaped pink to lavender flowers dainty, the plant is easty to grow.

Grow it yourself and be sure to send a container to the nearest school so the children may grow and watch this wonder.

THE SLIGHTEST TOUCH elicits an immediate response from a sensitive plant. Here seedlings are growing in a pre-planted container and can be potted later for house use or grown outdoors.

Chrysanthemum Blooms Have Keeping Quality

Annual chrysanthemums are an asset to any garden for they bloom profusely during summer and early fall, especially when and where the weather is not too hot.

Extremely easy to grow, they need only a sunny place and, preferably, clay soil. Seeds of both single and double-flowered types are available and there also is a tetraploid variety with extra-large blooms.

SEEDS of the double-flowered types will produce a high percentage of plants with fully double flowers, but there also will be some single-flowered plants.

One of the interesting aspects of growing annual chrysanthemums is observing the variation in flowers, not only in form but also in color.

Most of the large flowers will be of a single color; white, yellow, orange, to brownish-red, but some of them will have rings or zones of one or several colors in sharp contrast to the ground hue.

IT'S FOR this reason that they often are called "Painted daisies".

All of the color combinations blend with one another so that flowers from a seed mixture may be used together in an arrangement if desired.

THE BLOOMS have excellent keeping quality and are entirely satisfactory in both garden and house.

Strains available include Rainbow and Merry, mixtures of single-flowered forms. Double Monarch and Coronarium Double, and the tetrapoid variety, Polar Star, with white blooms centered yellow, each 4 to 5 inches in diameter, on stems 3 feet high.

A CHECKLIST FOR GARDENERS OF MARIN

Here's the Marin gardener's checklist for the coming week.

- Feed azaleas, rhododendrons, and camellias as well as most other shade plants with an acid fertilizer. The label tells you which plants like an acid food, and amounts to use.
- Rooted chrysanthemum cuttings are available in nurseries this month. These will give you lovely color in the garden this fall. They transplant easily from plant bands. Pinch back at the time of planting.
- Plant the Dwarf (bedding) dahlias for a quick show of color.
- Tomatoes are often fussy about their climate requirements. The plants your nurseryman offers are adapted to your own area.
- Prune and shape evergreens of all kinds. A little careful work with the pruning shears will bring out the best in all shrubs.

AN UNIMAGINATIVE PATIO area can be revived by covering paving with an elevated wood deck surrounded by screening plants and revamping the planting plan for the yard.

Unsatisfactory, Dreary Patio Can Be Covered With Deck

Bored with your patio? It should never happen, and needn't. Any time that the patio's appearance values don't match those of the house or don't satisfy the owner's sense of beauty and livability, there's an excellent case for starting anew.

SOLUTIONS generally aren't difficult to conceive or to execute. In most cases, answers will be found in a fresh covering for old paving, addition or redesign of privacy screening, and an updated planting plan.

To cover up the old patio, a new one could be built in the form of a wood deck, which can be set directly over the existing patio and elevated to whatever height is desirable.

EXACTLY that was done at one home, the new deck elevated two feet above the old patio's surface with the result that it now looks something like a floating island. That effect was emphasized by graduating the height of plant materials from the lowest near the deck's edge to the tallest against privacy screening a few yards away.

A few tall shrubs of narrow growth and upright branching pattern were set close to the deck to lend perspective, and a handsome silk tree planted on one side overhangs the deck like an umbrella, creating delightful shadow patterns with its froth of long, lacy leaves.

To create an elegant, slim-lined look similar to oak strip flooring, Douglas fir 2 x 4 deck boards were laid on edge and finished with bleaching oil. Privacy screens of cedar 1 x 2s repeat the lines of the deck.

With house and garage walls on two sides, screening on the other two, what had been a drab, too-exposed patio became a charming private courtyard designed for real livability and garden beauty.

The planting plan, while retaining a good many of the area's original shrubs — conifers, particularly — also called for new additions, some replacements, and relocation of a few shrubs to achieve top appearance and reduce maintenance.

Tips on Purchase and Home Care of Your Wardrobe

MARIN CLEANERS Phone 454-4792 – Member N.I.D. of San Rafael, Bel Aire & Fairfax

"Is It Necessary To Continue Sending Suits to Cleaners?"

You wouldn't expect me to say "No" would you? However, whether it is "necessary" or not depends upon you. Maintaining a well-dressed appearance is not an expense, it is an investment. Like any other investment it takes time, judgment and money. Too frequently men make a considerable investment in a wardrobe, then forget to consider the cost of upkeep and care.

The best-appearing suit will lose value if the shoulders are powdered with dandruff, the collar greasy from perspiration, when the seat is baggy and wrinkled, the knees or cuffline is baggy or when spots appear on a necktie or suit jacket.

Keeping suits, slacks, jackets spotlessly clean and pressed correctly not only removes destructive soil, but maintains their tailored shape and keeps you appearing at your best, preserving the investment you have made in your suit.

Painting Step By Step For Better Job

Painting the walls of a room should take place after the ceilings have been done and before the woodwork and trim are tackled.

If the floor also is to be finished, it should be the very last part of the over-all project, whether it is to be painted, varnished or covered with resilient floor tile or any other material.

STEP NO. 1 in wall painting involves the elimination of all loose dirt, peeling paint, oil and grease. An odorless paint thinner or a detergent will remove most stains. Dust will yield to a dry mop or a vacuum cleaner. Use a putty knife to scrape off peeling paint.

Spackling compound or patching plaster will take care of cracks or holes. Generally, such patches should be primed after they have dried and been sanded smooth.

Read the label on the paint can to determine whether priming is necessary and which type of primer is recommended.

IF YOU are painting over any surface which has retained some of its gloss, it must be dulled with sandpaper or with a special compound made especially for this purpose.

If only certain areas are glossy, it is not necessary to dull the finish of the entire wall. Be especially sure that all wax or polish has been removed from such things as kitchen cabinets.

START painting in the upper corner of any wall, using a partially dry brush with a small amount of paint on the bristle tips so that you can paint a neat line next to the ceiling. Angle the brush into the corner of the wall and make light, horizontal strokes so the bristles ride naturally in the upper corner.

After that, using either a brush or a roller, paint with vertical strokes. With a roller, the first stroke should be upward, then downward and then crosswise.

ALWAYS PAINT in a dry area toward a wet one, blending in the laps. With a brush, apply the paint to the wall; don't slap it on. With a roller, don't roll too fast and don't spin the roller at the end of a stroke.

While professional painters move right from the walls to the woodwork and trim, it is better for the do-it-yourselfer (unless he has had considerable experience) to wait for the ceiling and the walls to dry thoroughly before taking on the woodwark and trim.

IN PAINTING windows, do the vertical parts of the sash first, then the horizontal ones. After that comes the sash frame, sliding the sash so all surfaces can be painted. Then do the sash tracks, the casing and the sill. The doors come next: first the casing and then the door itself. The baseboards are last.

Peek-A-Boo Fence For Air

A peek-a-boo fence can give your yard definition without being considered an unneighborly "spite" project.

Give it a see-through effect for improved appearance, better ventilation and improved neighbor relations.

THERE ARE various ways of building a peek-a-boo fence, suggests John Concord, home improvement consultant to Masonite Corporation.

One is to turn square or rectangular pieces of hardboard siding on their corners between the framing members.

Another is to weave the siding strips into a basketweave. Or you can alternate siding panels with expanded metal lath for a breezy effect.
